Bigger Budget Sought By EOC To Cut Backlog

By LYNN ZERSCHLING

If justice delayed is, in fact, justice denied, there probably is some injustice in Nebraska's fair employment, housing and public accommodations laws.

Those laws are administered by the Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission (EOC), which operates on a $151,000 budget and has a backlog of cases stretching back to 1972.

Although the backlog itself does not overly concern Essie Burden, chairperson of the commission, the time lag between filing a complaint and receiving a judgment does.

"There will always be a backlog as long as people discriminate," she said.

'Should Not Be Discouraged'

And, while the time span measuring the life of a case should be reduced, she said, "people should not be discouraged if it takes 20 years to achieve justice."

In an effort to help break the logjam and do a better job, the commission is asking for a 91% budget hike for 1974-75, or a new total of nearly $288,000.

The budget hike would increase the agency's staff by seven members and would allow it to open a third office in western Nebraska. Offices now operate in Lincoln and Omaha.

EOC Executive Director Lawrence Myers said his goal is to whittle down the time lag between the original charge and a final decision to four months.

The time lag for cases varies widely now. Some cases filed in the latter half of this year already have been settled through conciliation. Others will be awaiting resolution a year from now.

Except for two cases stretching back to September, 1972, the maximum time period hovers around 18 months, Myers said.

499 Filed In One Year

A total of 499 cases were filed with the commission during the 12-month period ending Nov. 16. More than 90% of them alleged discrimination in employment. Forty-five allegations involved housing or public accommodations incidents.

Since the commission's formation in 1965, its caseload has steadily increased. Its budget has increased too, but not nearly so fast.

An increased budget would help cut into the backlog of cases, Burden said. But it also may increase the caseload, she noted.

More money would allow the commission to expand its educational role and enlarge public awareness of the agency.

Although the EOC could be swamped with additional complaints, Burden said, "it is only when we are inundated with legitimate complaints that we will begin to approach the idea of equal opportunity."

Sex Complaints Up

Since 1965 the largest increase in cases has involved alleged sex discrimination in employment. But women's rights are not the only source of increasing activity.

Indians and Chicanos are making more use of the commission.

Myers, a black, is pleased that Chicanos and Indians have started coming to the commission for help.

"Most of the civil rights laws were viewed as being for blacks," he noted.

"They are really designed to combat all kinds of discrimination."

And minorities living in western Nebraska are now becoming aware that they have someplace to go to combat discrimination.

A western office, serving the area west and north of North Platte (where 110 cases were filed in 1974), would help "let them know someone is there to help them," Myers said.

Money to that outstate office is one of the major blanks in the EOC's budget.

Without that office, it will remain difficult for western Nebraskans to rectify discrimination charges.

"Don't Have Accessibility"

"They don't have the accessibility to the commission that people around Lincoln and Omaha have," said Lincoln's Human Rights Officer Gerald Henderon.

One item not in the budget is money to hire a full-time attorney. Several people who have filed complaints with the EOC and former commissioner Anne Patrick Trombley argue that the EOC needs a lawyer.

Myers said he has not requested an attorney since he believes having a lawyer on the staff wouldn't be "the panacea people would like to believe it would be."

He did acknowledge that the EOC does have some problems dealing with employers, who usually hire attorneys on their own to deal with the commission.

"We're a bunch of non-lawyers dealing with lawyers," Myers said. "And that's the paradoxical thing," he said, since the intent of the law was to have the EOC deal directly with personnel officers of companies.

Although the commission attempts to conciliate differences, the employers can stall and the EOC "is not getting that good cooperation out of some of them," Myers said.

And that means more time is eaten up trying to work out the problem.

Tried To Avoid Delay

Agencies like the Equal Opportunity Commission were created because the court dockets were so heavy that people were not getting a fair opportunity due to the long wait in court, Myers said.

But now, those same problems of delay are afflicting the administrative agencies.

"I think it's taking a little too long to resolve cases in our agency," Myers acknowledged, "although we're not too bad compared to some."

Myers is hoping to get that big budget increase to step up EOC's fight against discrimination.

But it is more likely that the commission will receive a modest inflationary budget increase.

And if that happens, "we'll continue to do the best we can," Myers said.

But, he warned, the time to get a case decided will then.

And the justice sought by complainants will be delayed.

Limits On Tar, Nicotine Urged By Cancer Board

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cancer Advisory Board has urged President Ford to appeal personally to the nation's tobacco companies for voluntary marketing of cigarettes much lower in tar and nicotine than those now available.

The board asked for the presidential appeal to be followed by action empowering a federal agency to set maximum cigarette tar and nicotine levels. These levels would steadily be lowered year by year.

Spokesmen for the tobacco industry have said in the past the industry is adamantly opposed to any federal regulation of cigarette tar and nicotine levels. No such regulation exists, although the Federal Trade Commission publishes reports of tar and nicotine levels in cigarettes.

In its assessment the Cancer Advisory Board cited numerous studies in humans that the board said showed a dose-response relationship between the number of cigarettes smoked and lung cancer.

Such evidence suggests that as a smoker cuts down the number of cigarettes smoked, he proportionately cuts down the risk.

The board cited other studies that showed reducing tar and nicotine in a cigarette, through a filter, for example, also reduces risk.

Tar and nicotine levels in 1973 averaged 19.2 milligrams of tar and 1.3 milligrams of nicotine — levels about half of what they JERUSALEM (AP) — Terrorists threw a hand grenade Sunday at a busload of Christmas pilgrims from the United States who were touring Jerusalem's holy sites. A teenage American girl was wounded.

The Palestine Liberation Organization — PLO — claimed responsibility for the attack and warned tourists against travel to holy lands inside Israeli-held territory this year.

Israeli authorities said 17 pilgrims from Jacksonville, Fla., had just boarded a red and white bus outside the Church of St.

Lazarus in East Jerusalem when a grenade exploded and shrapnel tore through the side of the vehicle.

The wounded girl was Dejean Reogle, 17, who underwent surgery for leg wounds. An Arab bystander suffered minor injuries and was treated and released.

It was the second terrorist attack since Friday and military officials said Arab guerrillas may be planning a terror campaign for the holiday season when Jerusalem and Bethlehem are crowded with pilgrims.

The PLO statement, distributed in Beirut, Lebanon by the Palestinian news agency WAFA, warned "all tourists travelling to Palestine and those on their way to it that we will not be responsible for whatever harm that might befall them

PLO leader Yasir Arafat told a news conference Saturday night in Algiers that "a fifth war in the Middle East is imminent." He said Israel planned to unleash a new war "because it cannot swallow the numerous setbacks it has suffered on the military and political level."

The leader of the American tour, the Rev. E.C. McDaniel, said "I heard an explosion which I thought was a huge firecracker. I turned immediately and saw a cloud of dust."

"One of our young girls screamed. I thought she was hysterical because of the loud noise and I asked her to be quiet, but she kept screaming."

As other passengers dived to the floor the girl's father rushed to her side and shouted, "There's blood, she's been hit," the Rev. McDaniel said.

Witnesses said the grenade landed about 30 feet from the bus and fragments ripped two holes through the metal sides.

Police cordoned off the area around the church, believed to be the site of the tomb where, according to Christian belief, Christ brought Lazarus back from the dead.

The state radio said 20 Arabs were rounded up for questioning in a house-to-house search.

"Before, I only heard explosions on television," said Robin Hudson, a member of the tour. "We read about terrorist attacks in the newspapers back home, but we never imagined it would happen to us."

For the group from the Main Street Baptist Church in Jacksonville, the attack marred what the Rev. McDaniel called a "once in a lifetime trip." But he said they would attend midnight services in the Church of the Nativity as planned.

Omaha Man Held In Fatal Shooting Of Brother Sunday

Omaha (UPI) — A 29-year-old Omaha man was held Sunday on suspicion of homicide in connection with the late morning shooting death of his younger brother.

In custody was Gary Blankenship.

Police said Timothy Edward Blankenship, 26, Lincoln, was shot five or six times outside the home of their father. Relatives said an argument over money matters developed shortly before Sunday noon between the two brothers.

Police said relatives in the West Omaha residence saw the two standing outside when Timothy suddenly spun around and fell to the ground.

A .22 caliber pistol was recovered at the scene, police said.

The victim was named to be a parole officer for the State Board of Parole in September 1973, and confirmed by the Legislature last March after some controversy.

He has been a district parole officer for the State Department of Corrections, a relative said.

Christmas Guideposts

Different Sort Of Innkeeper

By DINA DONOHUE

For years now whenever Christmas pageants are talked about in a certain little town in the Midwest, someone is sure to mention the name of Wallace Purling. Wallace's performance in one annual production of the Nativity play has slipped into the realm of legend.

Wally was nine that year and in the second grade, though he should have been in the fourth. Most people in town knew that he had difficulty in keeping up. He was big and clumsy, slow in movement and mind. Still, Wally was well liked by the other children in his class, all of whom were smaller than he.

He was always a helpful boy, a willing and smiling one, and the natural protector, paradoxically, of the underdog. Sometimes if the older boys chased the younger ones away, it would always be Wally who'd say, "Can't they stay? They're no bother."

Wally fancied the idea of being a shepherd with a flute in the Christmas pageant that year, but the play's director, Miss Lombard, assigned him to a more important role. After all, she reasoned, the Innkeeper did not have too many lines, and Wally's size would make his refusal of lodging to Joseph more forceful.

And so it happened that the usual large, partisan audience gathered for the town's yearly extravaganza of crooks and creches, of beards, crowns, halos and a whole stageful of squeaky voices. No one on stage or off was more caught up in the magic of the night than Wallace Purling. They said later that he stood in the wings and watched the performance with such fascination that from time to time Miss Lombard had to make sure he didn't wander onstage before his cue.

Then the time came when Joseph appeared, slowly, tenderly guiding Mary to the door of the inn. Joseph knocked hard on the wooden door set into the painted backdrop. Wally the Innkeeper was there, waiting.

"What do you want?" Wally said, swinging the door open with a brusque gesture.

"We seek lodging."

"Seek it elsewhere." Wally looked straight ahead but spoke vigorously. "The inn is filled."

"Sir, we have asked everywhere in vain. We have traveled far and are very weary."

"There is no room in this inn for you." Wally looked properly stern.

"Please, good innkeeper, this is my wife, Mary. She is heavy with child and needs a place to rest. Surely you must have some small corner for her. She is so tired."

Now, for the first time, the Innkeeper relaxed his stiff stance and looked down at Mary. With that, there was a long pause, long enough to make the audience a bit tense with embarrassment.

"No! Begone!" the prompter whispered from the wings.

"No!" Wally repeated automatically. "Begone!"

Joseph sadly placed his arm around Mary and Mary laid her head upon her husband's shoulder and the two of them started to move away. The Innkeeper did not return inside his inn, however. Wally stood there in the doorway, watching the forlorn couple. His mouth was open, his brow creased with concern, his eyes filling unmistakably with tears.

And suddenly this Christmas pageant became different from all others.

"Don't go, Joseph," Wally called out. "Bring Mary back." And Wallace Purling's face grew into a bright smile. "You can have my room."

Some people in town thought that the

Spokesmen for the tobacco industry have said in the past the industry is adamantly opposed to any federal regulation of cigarette tar and nicotine levels. No such regulation exists, although the Federal Trade Commission publishes reports of tar and nicotine levels in cigarettes.

The Cancer Advisory Board's recommendations to Ford came in response to the President's Oct. 23 request for an assessment of scientific evidence that would provide a basis for federal cigarette regulation. Ford's request came after the board recommended regulation in its 1974 report to Congress.

A copy of the recommendations, which were recently forwarded to the White House, has been made available to The Associated Press.

"It should be possible to deny those cigarettes which are obviously high in nicotine and tar access to interstate commerce and thereby discourage their manufacture," the board's report to Congress last fall said.

Noting in his letter of transmittal that accompanied the report to the lawmakers that "there is considerable dispute" about the scientific evidence available, Ford asked for an assessment of the evidence "that would provide a basis for responsible federal regulation of cigarettes."

In its assessment the Cancer Advisory Board cited numerous studies in humans that the board said showed a dose-response relationship between the number of cigarettes smoked and lung cancer.

Such evidence suggests that as a smoker cuts down the number of cigarettes smoked, he proportionately cuts down the risk.

The board cited other studies that showed reducing tar and nicotine in a cigarette, through a filter, for example, also reduces risk.

Tar and nicotine levels in 1973 averaged 19.2 milligrams of tar and 1.3 milligrams of nicotine — levels about half of what they were two decades ago when concern about smoking and health first surfaced.

Some doctors believe that the public can be induced to smoke cigarettes lower and lower in tar and nicotine, thus reducing the health risk.

But there also is a fear that if the tar and nicotine are lowered too quickly, smokers will compensate by smoking more cigarettes.

The idea, then, is to steadily wean smokers from strong cigarettes without their noticing it.

The board warned that "likely to produce, but cannot guarantee, a reduction of hazards from smoking."

It has been a district parole officer for the State Department of Corrections, a relative said.

Investigation Requested By Former CIA Officials

NEW YORK (AP) — Former CIA Director John McCone and his executive director-controller, Lyman Kirkpatrick, on Sunday urged President Ford and Congress to investigate charges that the Central Intelligence Agency mounted a huge campaign against antiwar forces in the United States during the Nixon era.

"I don't think an accusation as prominently displayed as this can be refuted merely on a denial by the agency itself," McCone said.

"There should be a penetrating investigation either by the Congress or by President Ford's Foreign Advisory Board."

Ford told newsmen in Grand Junction, Colo., that he had received a telephone call from CIA Director William E. Colby assuring him that "nothing comparable to what was stated in the article was going on over there and I told him that under no circumstances would I tolerate any such activities under this administration."

The President neither confirmed nor denied that he had information that activities such as those reported by Seymour Hersh in Sunday's New York Times had actually occurred under President Nixon.

McCone said the former chief executive was "unduly agitated" about antiwar groups and might have issued direct orders, bypassing normal agency channels.

"I was amazed to read the article and in my connection as director of the agency and my connection with it since, I never heard of a single instance where the CIA stepped over its charter and involved itself with the responsibilities of the FBI," he said.

"We had the closest possible relations with the FBI when I was there. What's happened since, I don't know."

"It's entirely out of character for the CIA to go beyond its charter."

"They (CIA) deal with foreign intelligence."

Kirkpatrick backed up this statement.

"To the best of my knowledge," he said, "there was never anything like this. If they did something like this, they were doing something they had no right to do and I deplore it."

The CIA gathers intelligence abroad and evaluates it at its headquarters in northern Virginia. The FBI has an analogous task within the boundaries of the United States.

Before the Nixon era, intelligence sources explained, the two agencies had a very close working relationship.

This weakened, they said, when the late J. Edgar Hoover, long-time director of the FBI, spurned White House demands for vigorous spy-type operations against political opponents and antiwar agitators.

The FBI, these sources said, kept a close watch on antiwar groups to determine whether they were actively subversive and to determine whether such groups had been infiltrated by foreign agents.

The CIA's only role, they said, was to reply when asked by the FBI whether it had knowledge that any suspects were known foreign agents.

"Cooperation was limited to identifying any suspected infiltrator," they said.

New York Times News Summary

Tax Cut Urged

Washington — Andrew F. Brimmer, former member of the Federal Reserve Board, has proposed to President Ford and congressional leaders a quick, one-time $13 billion stimulus for the economy through a 10% reduction in the federal income tax everyone will owe next April.

Changes Agreed

Washington — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said the United States and the Soviet Union had agreed to alter the wording of the Vladivostok arms-control accord to insure that reductions in each side's nuclear forces could be negotiated before the accord expires in 1985.

Harvest Disappointing

Peking (London Times) — China has evidently reaped another rather disappointing grain harvest this year. An official report said the harvest had shown "a fairly big increase" over 1973 but such vocabulary is restrained by Chinese standards and suggests only a modest increase.

Campaign Seen

Moscow — A campaign appears to be under way here to discredit the assertion in Washington that Moscow made concessions on its emigration policy in return for the reduced import tariffs and credits approved last week by Congress. Pravda, the official Communist Party newspaper, expressed the Kremlin's displeasure with the emigration qualifications attached to the trade legislation and hinted that Moscow would not consider them valid.

Turkey To Talk

Ankara — Turkish officials are ready to begin serious negotiations over Cyprus but say they do not want Archbishop Makarios controlling the negotiations. They want Greeks to agree that any settlement must be based on "geographical federation" principal.

and white wool hat with his black ski pants and red plastic ski boots.

Mrs. Ford, who has been ailing recently, said she hoped to try some cross-country skiing. She said she wasn't sure if she could do it but added: "I feel much better."

Mrs. Ford said the weather was perfect, "what more can a skier ask than to arrive in a snowstorm?"

Accompanied by members of his family and his golden retriever dog, Liberty, Ford landed at Grand Junction, Colo., and flew by helicopter part of the 100 miles to Vail. The helicopters landed in a snowy clearing at the hamlet of Avon, only about 10 miles from this ski resort.

The President was in a jovial mood as he started his first holiday since he took office five months ago.

He chatted with staff and reporters and joined in a birthday celebration aboard Air Force One for Barbara Manfuso of Chevy Chase, Md., who turned 18 Sunday. She is a schoolmate of his daughter, Susan. Birthday cake was passed out as President and Mrs. Ford joined in the party.

Ford came to chat with reporters aboard the plane and when asked if he viewed this as a vacation, said:

"No. I've got about 150 bills to sign and a few other matters to work on."

The President said he expected to work about two or three hours a day and probably ski three hours. But, he said it might turn out to be "more work than skiing. We're trying to organize it."

Crash In Venezuela Kills All 77 On Liner

Maturin, Venezuela (AP) — A Venezuelan airliner on a domestic flight exploded and crashed shortly after taking off from Maturin airport Sunday, killing all 77 persons aboard, a spokesman for Avensa airline said.

The spokesman declined to speculate on sabotage or a possible hijack attempt, saying only that there "was an explosion aboard" about four minutes after takeoff and "then the aircraft went down."

Investigation Requested By Former CIA Officials

NEW YORK (AP) — Former CIA Director John McCone and his executive director-controller, Lyman Kirkpatrick, on Sunday urged President Ford and Congress to investigate charges that the Central Intelligence Agency mounted a huge campaign against antiwar forces in the United States during the Nixon era.

"I don't think an accusation as prominently displayed as this can be refuted merely on a denial by the agency itself," McCone said.

"There should be a penetrating investigation either by the Congress or by President Ford's Foreign Advisory Board."

Ford told newsmen in Grand Junction, Colo., that he had received a telephone call from CIA Director William E. Colby assuring him that "nothing comparable to what was stated in the article was going on over there and I told him that under no circumstances would I tolerate any such activities under this administration."

The President neither confirmed nor denied that he had information that activities such as those reported by Seymour Hersh in Sunday's New York Times had actually occurred under President Nixon.

Sens. Charles M. Mathias, R-Md., and Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., introduced a resolution last fall urging a full study of domestic intelligence activities.

Kirkpatrick, now a professor at Brown University, Providence, R.I., said: "An investigation has now become inevitable."

Both he and McCone denied, in separate interviews, that any such program was under way in the years they ran the agency through 1965.

If such a program, which the New York Times said included compiling intelligence dossiers on at least 10,000 American citizens including a congressman, came into existence, the intelligence experts blamed President Nixon.

McCone said the former chief executive was "unduly agitated" about antiwar groups and might have issued direct orders, bypassing normal agency channels.

"I was amazed to read the article and in my connection as director of the agency and my connection with it since, I never heard of a single instance where the CIA stepped over its charter and involved itself with the responsibilities of the FBI," he said.

"We had the closest possible relations with the FBI when I was there. What's happened since, I don't know."

"It's entirely out of character for the CIA to go beyond its charter."

"They (CIA) deal with foreign intelligence."

Kirkpatrick backed up this statement.

"To the best of my knowledge," he said, "there was never anything like this. If they did something like this, they were doing something they had no right to do and I deplore it."

The CIA gathers intelligence abroad and evaluates it at its headquarters in northern Virginia. The FBI has an analogous task within the boundaries of the United States.

Before the Nixon era, intelligence sources explained, the two agencies had a very close working relationship.

This weakened, they said, when the late J. Edgar Hoover, long-time director of the FBI, spurned White House demands for vigorous spy-type operations against political opponents and antiwar agitators.

The Matrin airport control tower said the jetliner made no mention of any problems.

"Takeoff instructions still were being followed and the plane still was making altitude," a control tower official said.

A member of the rescue team said the victims were strewn over a wide area. "I can assure you that it will be difficult to identify the dead bodies," he added.

"Cooperation was limited to identifying any suspected infiltrator," they said.

PRESIDENT . . . and ski instructor on perfect day.

Ford On Slopes, Takes One Spill

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — Wearing a bright orange ski jacket, President Ford went for a 70-minute ski run down Vail Mountain on Sunday, taking one spill but declaring snow conditions were just to his liking on the first day of a vacation holiday.

"The snow is terrific," Ford said as he came down from the mountain where there was an accumulation of 60 inches of snow. "It's the best snow for the first day since I've been here," he said.

Secret Service agents, ski instructor Dennis C. Hoeger, and two members of the Vail Ski Patrol accompanied the President. The President "sat down" once on his first trip down the slopes, Hoeger told reporters.

Ford, the nation's first skiing President, was out on the slopes less than two hours after he arrived at this Rocky Mountain ski resort from Washington.

"I hope my skiing matches the outfit," Ford told the small crowd which cheered as he took off in a chairlift on his first outing. His orange jacket had bright yellow and black stripes at the shoulders and he wore an orange and white wool hat with his black ski pants and red plastic ski boots.

Mrs. Ford, who has been ailing recently, said she hoped to try some cross-country skiing. She said she wasn't sure if she could do it but added: "I feel much better."

Mrs. Ford said the weather was perfect, "what more can a skier ask than to arrive in a snowstorm?"

Accompanied by members of his family and his golden retriever dog, Liberty, Ford landed at Grand Junction, Colo., and flew by helicopter part of the 100 miles to Vail. The helicopters landed in a snowy clearing at the hamlet of Avon, only about 10 miles from this ski resort.

The President was in a jovial mood as he started his first holiday since he took office five months ago.

He chatted with staff and reporters and joined in a birthday celebration aboard Air Force One for Barbara Mandrell of Chevy Chase, Md., who turned 18 Sunday. She is a schoolmate of his daughter, Susan. Birthday cake was passed out as President and Mrs. Ford joined in the party.

Ford came to chat with reporters aboard the plane and when asked if he viewed this as a vacation, said:

"No. I've got about 150 bills to sign and a few other matters to work on."

The President said he expected to work about two or three hours a day and probably ski three hours. But, he said it might turn out to be "more work than skiing. We're trying to organize it."

New York Times News Summary

Tax Cut Urged

Washington — Andrew F. Brimmer, former member of the Federal Reserve Board, has proposed to President Ford and congressional leaders a quick, one-time $13 billion stimulus for the economy through a 10% reduction in the federal income tax everyone will owe next April.

Changes Agreed

Washington — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger said the United States and the Soviet Union had agreed to alter the wording of the Vladivostok arms-control accord to insure that reductions in each side's nuclear forces could be negotiated before the accord expires in 1985.

Harvest Disappointing

Peking (London Times) — China has evidently reaped another rather disappointing grain harvest this year. An official report said the harvest had shown "a fairly big increase" over 1973 but such vocabulary is restrained by Chinese standards and suggests only a modest increase.

Campaign Seen

Moscow — A campaign appears to be under way here to discredit the assertion in Washington that Moscow made concessions on its emigration policy in return for the reduced import tariffs and credits approved last week by Congress. Pravda, the official Communist Party newspaper, expressed the Kremlin's displeasure with the emigration qualifications attached to the trade legislation and hinted that Moscow would not consider them valid.

Turkey To Talk

Ankara — Turkish officials are ready to begin serious negotiations over Cyprus but say they do not want Archbishop Makarios controlling the negotiating. They want Greeks to agree that any settlement must be based on "geographical federation" principal.

Child Rescued From Irrigation Well

MIAMI (AP) — Rescuers using air hammers chiseled through coral rock Sunday and freed a 15-month-old girl trapped in a narrow irrigation well. The girl emerged without a scratch after four hours.

Amber Noel Peebles wandered from her parents as they picked tomatoes for their Christmas dinner. She fell through a 9-inch-wide hole and was stuck in waist-deep water about seven feet down the 22-foot well.

"I imagine she was plenty frightened. I knew she was walking behind me. I turned around, and she just wasn't there," said her father, Harry S. Peebles, a 21-year-old sergeant at nearby Homestead Air Force Base.

"We were picking tomatoes for Christmas dinner with my folks in St. Petersburg," said Peebles. "She has been walking for almost six months now. I let her walk whenever I get the chance."

FIRE Lt. Pete Hendricks, a member of the three-man team that dug for the girl, said, "We had to dig a new hole to get to her, because we couldn't chance anything falling in from the top of the well."

Rescuers said the 36-inch-tall girl apparently did not fall all the way to the bottom because of a pocket of air which buoyed her up. But her movements caused the water to rise up to her waist, they theorized.

"We had to dig under her and then through to her, and with the water table so high here, we had to make sure no water got over her head," he said. "We've done this four times before. There's just no other way to do it."

"Just so she's okay," Peebles said as rescuers using air hammers and hand tools worked their way underground. Mrs. Peebles dabbed at her eyes with a handkerchief and said nothing.

Terrorists Bomb Home Of Ex-Prime Minister

LONDON (AP) — A terrorist bomb exploded at the house of former Prime Minister Edward Heath on Sunday night, only minutes before the Conservative party leader arrived back from a concert of Christmas carols. Police said there were no casualties.

Authorities said Heath's housekeeper and a woman servant were in the eight-room, rented house at 17 Wilton Street just 300 yards from Buckingham Palace at the time of the explosion. They said damage was extensive on the first floor.

Police said the explosive apparently was thrown at the house from a passing car which later was found abandoned about 10 blocks away.

Heath, the leader of the opposition since his Conservative party lost to the Labor party in

Pact OK'd By Mine Workers

Washington (UPI) — The 4,500 striking mine construction workers ratified a new three-year contract Sunday, paving the way for immediate resumption of full scale coal production across the country.

The United Mine Workers of America said the contract was approved by a 2-1 margin with 75% of the vote counted.

"Work will resume immediately," a UMW spokesman said.

He said union president Arnold Miller "directed the mine construction workers to report to work starting the first shift on Monday."

Union leaders had predicted approval as soon as voting started.

DIRTY, BUT SAFE . . . Amber fell into well.

Hendricks said Amber's clothing was secured by a hook so she would not slip further down the well.

Workers said the little girl's cries encouraged them and helped them estimate her position in the well.

"That rock was hard as concrete and sharp as a knife," Hendricks said during the rescue attempt. But doctors at Baptist Hospital said the girl survived the ordeal without apparent injury.

The uncapped well, half-covered with tomato plants, is in a field where buyers are invited to pick their own vegetables.

After a child drowned in a similar well earlier this year, a county ordinance was passed ordering all such wells capped or marked. Police said they would investigate to see if there was a possible violation.

The Contested Election

It is a forlorn hope that total objectivity will prevail when the Legislature considers Terry Carpenter's contest of the election of William Nichol to the 48th District seat.

Carpenter, thwarted by the district bench in Scottsbluff in his challenge of decisions to throw out write-in ballots which did not correctly spell his name or which failed to include a first name or initial, has asked his former colleagues to judge the matter. He has further threatened to appeal an adverse decision by the Legislature to higher courts.

At a meeting of some 12 senators last Wednesday it was suggested that a 1959 contested election precedent be followed by appointing a special committee which would review the contested ballots and make a recommendation to the full Legislature to follow.

A number of the lawmakers present at the meeting stressed their belief that the intent of the voter should be the determining factor in counting challenged ballots. That, we think, should be the only factor: who did the voter have in mind when he or she wrote whatever was written on the contested ballots.

Unresolved this week was the question of whether the Legislature would make its final decision regarding the contested election on an open or secret vote. To encourage objectivity and a resolution of the issue on grounds other than personality, an open vote by the members would be required.

Objectivity in deciding this contested election is in doubt because the challenger is Terry Carpenter. For longer than many of his colleagues care to remember, former Sen. Carpenter has bullied, cajoled, obstructed progress or pushed an unwilling Unicameral into action (but on the whole, in our opinion, his has been a positive, rather than negative, contribution.) By force of personality, intellect, diligence and guts he has in his career kept most other legislators in his shadow.

For many of the senators, it is a welcome prospect to be rid of him. And now Terry comes and asks that the Legislature reverse an election which found him reelected out by 68 votes.

The Legislature will decide who it seats from the 48th District and it should carry out the responsibility with the intent of the district's voters, rather than the personalities, firmly in mind. And when it comes to the final decision, that should be by an open vote, so the senators' judgments themselves can be judged.

Highway Delay Unwarranted?

A delegation representing Lincoln interests was reportedly shocked last Friday when told by state highway officials that 1978 would be the earliest time for bidding on the $2.5 million West Cornhusker Hwy. improvement project.

The highway links the city with the Municipal Airport and Lincoln interests are pushing for early completion and an upgraded design for the road in light of the new airport improvements.

Paul Amen, president of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, was reported as saying the 1978 bid-letting projection represents an unwarranted delay. "I didn't know the wheels of progress turned so slowly," he said.

But state officials said the project — one of several priority state projects in the Lincoln area — has not been intentionally sidetracked. The problem, according to state highway officials, is the maze of bureaucratic red tape the state must follow

ON TARGET

By DON WALTON

Hey, neat town. Even the guy with the same name might think so.

Here in Lincoln Indians are receiving their first court hearing on their treaty rights — without incident. That might not happen in every city in the Plains.

And here in Lincoln the Godfather has been roaming the streets — without producing the slightest panic, at all. What a gutsy town.

The Don has shown up at a number of public events, dropped in on the trial, visited the campus and met citizens at neighborhood cocktail parties. But what else was he doing when he wasn't visible?

Organizing the bookies? Taking over the church bingo operations? Setting up another pizza house?

At least, we can feel secure that he isn't peddling drugs. (Even if Sonny might want to.)

At the most, considering his scruples, he might try to corner the Excedrin market for New Year's weekend.

But what else? What's the Godfather been doing on the side?

At the risk of turning up in Salt Creek (face down, sir, if drowning is your game) or having my glasses broken with a neatly placed bullet, the time has come to share the truth.

One dark night, when the mist was rising off the snow and steam was puffing from the storm sewers, when it was dark and quiet and foreboding, a big black limousine carried him through the deserted streets.

He sat in the back, a huge overcoat buttoned about his neck, a crease across his brow, his eyes staring straight ahead. And, so, quietly, secretly, he moved through the night.

At last, the car eased to a halt. And his door was opened from the outside. Out into the frigid night air stepped the Godfather. And, without a sound, he strode across the walk and in the door.

"It is time," he told them.

They nodded, mumblying their agreement.

And so the deed was done. And they gathered in a line to clasp his hand and pay homage to their Don.

One of them lingered to speak alone with him, seeking reassurance that all would be well.

"You won't let them down?" he asked.

WILLIAM SAFIRE

NEW YORK — The search for the Northwest Passage — a water route from Europe to Cathay, across the frozen wastes of North America — was one of the great adventure stories of all time, the vain quest of Sir Francis Drake and Henry Hudson, finally discovered at the turn of this century by Arctic explorer Ronald Amundsen.

With a prosaic thud, the mercenary consequence of this adventure was covered on the shipping news pages recently under the headline: "Waters Off Jersey Will Become Terminus of Northwest Passage." Ice-breaking supertankers will one day be bringing millions of barrels of Alaskan crude oil down through the bays and seaways of Canada to offshore terminals near Cape May.

Once again we see the pragmatizing of a dream, the glory of exploration ending up in a big tank in New Jersey. But the search for the Northwest Passage always had a commercial impetus; what has happened to adventure for adventure's sake, the sweetening of life by risk that rejects the practical application of exploration or the commercial embodiment of Evel Knievel?

MARQUIS CHILDS

NEW YORK — A large bemused lady in the crowded toy shop was buying six dolls. They talk, they walk, they wet, all battery-propelled. The price, $80, plus tax. One for each of my six granddaughters, she tells the clerk.

The story is the same in the luxury stores in the glittering heart of Manhattan. In Cartier's and Tiffany's, the diamond necklaces and the emerald bracelets are going fast. The chic fur stores are finding it difficult to keep stocked with sables, a full-length cost at $25,000 and up.

In the streets, the big, black gas guzzlers help to jam the traffic that creeps along the main arteries. With chauffeurs at the wheel, limousines are parked double, the motor idling to keep the interior warm.

Whatever the indicators may say about unemployment, recession and inflation this, on the surface, is Boomtown, U.S.A. The big spenders are still spending. They will help to raise the level of the Christmas trade and overcome the pinch said to be felt by lower-priced stores.

Here is the paradox of a bankrupt city and a nation with the highest rate of unemployment in 13 years. Mayor Abraham Beame is struggling desperately to cut the budget gap by firing or forcing the early retirement of up to 8,000 city employees and this has meant a confrontation with the unions representing these workers.

Outside, the Husker fans will fill the stadium despite the increased ticket price, greeting their heroes with a roar.

The LSU players warm up nervously, with one eye on the sideline crew — the tall men in black overcoats with guns in their holsters. "Security," their badges proclaim.

The crowd is startled, but unconcerned, when the band plays Italian music prior to the game, directed by a man in a big black overcoat.

LSU's coaching staff considers protesting when the referees all show up in big black overcoats, but the sideline crew persuades them to forego any challenge.

When the Huskers make a first down on two consecutive one-yard plunges on their initial possession, Coach McLendon gasps. Later, after the game, he will tell sportswriters he recognized that as "the turning point."

Later, when the Tigers reach the Husker one-yard-line midway through the second quarter, the gun goes off — signaling the end of the first half. The LSU backfield, which hit the ground en masse when the shot was fired, is almost relieved, despite their inability to score.

An hour later, the game is over, and the Huskers have chalked up their first victory of the year.

An outsider is admitted to the VIP section.

"Godfather, you were right," he said. "It's going to be okay."

"I told you that last winter," the Don mumbles. "I told you it would be better this way. You will see. They will be unbeaten."

"They will never lose another game."

Thank you, Godfather.

Not many of us. The remnants of America's space program, a great adventure drowned in the sinking of America's national spirit after Vietnam, is today justified merely on military, diplomatic and applied-science grounds.

When John F. Kennedy said, "America has tossed its cap over the wall of space" — and what a beautiful figure of speech that was, of a kid presenting himself with a challenge — he did not say that space foods designed for astronauts would be great in school lunch boxes, or that satellite reconnaissance would make possible future arms control agreements.

Essentially, the object was to shoot for the moon, which would not only enhance our national pride at beating the Russians there but lift our spirits at the thought of what puny man could do. But then we became self-conscious about our success, and embarrassed at spending so much money on pure adventure when there were mouths to feed on earth.

Sir Edmund Hillary, who led the expedition that conquered Mt. Everest, spoke of adventure the other day delivering the Frank Nelson Doubleday lecture at the Smithsonian Institution. "I have often resented the way that science has sometimes been introduced to justify an interesting adventure — particularly if a lot of money is required.

"Adventure is worthwhile for its own sake," said the man who had just come back from scaling some peaks in the Antarctic. "How many of us have been stimulated by some glorious effort that had no conceivable economic or scientific reward?"

the real superpowers are. The probe of the solar system by Pioneer 11 is said to be finding useful data on radiation belts and whatnot mumbo-jumbo.

The reason we have poked a hole in the sky with a rocket is that we are as curious as hell to find out what is out there. Adventure is danger faced for the sake of curiosity, the rise to a challenge "because it's there." Such self-testing ennobles the human spirit.

Why, then, is there not great public fascination with the half-billion-mile flight of Pioneer 11 to Jupiter, wonderment at its grazing the Jovian clouds and then using Jupiter's gravity to "crack the whip" and head for Saturn, a half-billion miles beyond?

The answer, of course, is that there are no human beings aboard and there can be no adventure without danger. But one day there will be men aboard (and women, and blacks, and young people, and ethnics) and this whole world will hold its breath as the human spirit reaches up and touches another whole world.

Viewed from centuries hence, these explorations will be the big news of our time, and our descendants will be amused at our self-consciousness at heavy costs of adventures. Why couldn't we see that such contests and heroics provided the necessary moral equivalent of war?

That is why we can hope that NASA's publicists do not equip next year's astronauts with link-up messages like, "This is a giant step for detente" or "The march of scientific progress is irreversible."

Let our adventurer crawl through the passageway, stick out his hand and say something more appropriate to the gloriously impractical spirit of the occasion. Like: "Dr. Livingston, I presume?"

The President And The Recession

"I CAN SO WALK AND CHEW GUM AT THE SAME TIME!"

Hardly surprising was the response of the Democratic majorities in Congress. They are coming up with proposals for extended unemployment compensation and massive public-service jobs requiring expenditures of billions of dollars. These measures seem certain to reach the President's desk presumably for his veto.

What should surprise and perhaps dismay Ford is the response of the Republicans. Forty-two GOP senators are calling for an attack on the economic problem, resembling in kind if not in quite the same degree what the Democrats put forward. Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., promptly put in a resolution for a 20-cent gasoline tax and a tax on horse power that would curb the guzzlers.

January and the new Congress will tell the tale. The indicators may by that time encourage the President in his firm stand against what he believes would be precipitous action. But the new Congress will be even more liberal-left and determined to get speedy action. This will mean a contest between executive and legislative that can hardly benefit the economy.

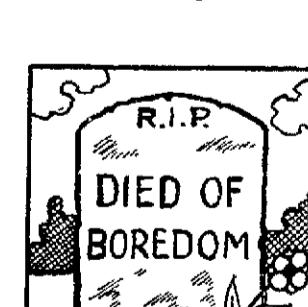

Ford in his first 100 days has been compared with Harry Truman who inherited the office in a time of grave uncertainty. But increasingly Ford is beginning to sound like another president who fell heir to the office by the accident of death. That was Calvin Coolidge.

Coolidge's problem was of quite another order than that of Ford. As the bull market boom roared on through the '20s, he spurned the measures that might have curbed that great gamble which ended with the crash of 1929.

The rule was hands off, as it has been to date with President Ford.

The Contested Election

It is a forlorn hope that total objectivity will prevail when the Legislature considers Terry Carpenter's contest of the election of William Nichol to the 48th District seat.

Carpenter, thwarted by the district bench in Scottsbluff in his challenge of decisions to throw out write-in ballots which did not correctly spell his name or which failed to include a first name or initial, has asked his former colleagues to judge the matter. He has further threatened to appeal an adverse decision by the Legislature to higher courts.

At a meeting of some 12 senators last Wednesday it was suggested that a 1959 contested election precedent be followed by appointing a special committee which would review the contested ballots and make a recommendation to the full Legislature to follow.

A number of the lawmakers present at the meeting stressed their belief that the intent of the voter should be the determining factor in counting challenged ballots. That, we think, should be the only factor: who did the voter have in mind when he or she wrote whatever was written on the contested ballots.

Unresolved this week was the question of whether the Legislature would make its final decision regarding the contested election on an open or secret vote. To encourage objectivity and a resolution of the issue on grounds other than personality, an open vote by the members would be required.

Objectivity in deciding this contested election is in doubt because the challenger is Terry Carpenter. For longer than many of his colleagues care to remember, former Sen. Carpenter has bullied, cajoled, obstructed progress or pushed an unwilling Unicameral into action (but on the whole, in our opinion, his has been a positive, rather than negative, contribution.) By force of personality, intellect, diligence and guts he has in his career kept most other legislators in his shadow.

For many of the senators, it is a welcome prospect to be rid of him. And now Terry comes and asks that the Legislature reverse an election which found him reelected out by 68 votes.

The Legislature will decide who it seats from the 48th District and it should carry out the responsibility with the intent of the district's voters, rather than the personalities, firmly in mind. And when it comes to the final decision, that should be by an open vote, so the senators' judgments themselves can be judged.

Highway Delay Unwarranted?

A delegation representing Lincoln interests was reportedly shocked last Friday when told by state highway officials that 1978 would be the earliest time for bidding on the $2.5 million West Cornhusker Hwy. improvement project.

The highway links the city with the Municipal Airport and Lincoln interests are pushing for early completion and an upgraded design for the road in light of the new airport improvements.

Paul Amen, president of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, was reported as saying the 1978 bidletting projection represents an unwarranted delay. "I didn't know the wheels of progress turned so slowly," he said.

But state officials said the project — one of several priority state projects in the Lincoln area — has not been intentionally sidetracked.

The problem, according to state highway officials, is the maze of bureaucratic red tape the state must follow in obtaining step-by-step federal approval of location and design and the public notification procedures that must be followed in order that the project qualify for 70% federal aid. If it is unwarranted, it is still fact.

The state could probably complete the job more quickly if it wanted to finance the project entirely.

The problem is that while the West Cornhusker Highway access road to the Municipal Airport is a total disgrace for a city of Lincoln's size, there is also a state highway money crunch and it would appear that the wait for federal funds is the option that will be chosen.

So the city can look at possibly a 1979 or 1980 opening of a four-lane West Cornhusker approach to the airport.

The state has suggested an interim asphalt overlay of the existing two-lane roadway. The city should push for at least that much.

Hey, neat town. Even the guy with the same name might think so.

Here in Lincoln Indians are receiving their first court hearing on their treaty rights — without incident. That might not happen in every city in the Plains.

And here in Lincoln the Godfather has been roaming the streets — without producing the slightest panic, at all. What a gutsy town.

The Don has shown up at a number of public events, dropped in on the trial, visited the campus and met citizens at neighborhood cocktail parties. But what else was he doing when he wasn't visible?

Organizing the bookies? Taking over the church bingo operations? Setting up another pizza house?

At least, we can feel secure that he isn't peddling drugs. (Even if Sonny might want to.)

At the most, considering his scruples, he might try to corner the Excedrin market for New Year's weekend.

But what else? What's the Godfather been doing on the side?

At the risk of turning up in Salt Creek (face down, sir, if drowning is your game) or having my glasses broken with a neatly placed bullet, the time has come to share the truth.

One dark night, when the mist was rising off the snow and steam was puffing from the storm sewers, when it was dark and quiet and foreboding, a big black limousine carried him through the deserted streets.

He sat in the back, a huge overcoat buttoned about his neck, a crease across his brow, his eyes staring straight ahead. And, so, quietly, secretly, he moved through the night.

At last, the car eased to a halt. And his door was opened from the outside. Out into the frigid night air stepped the Godfather. And, without a sound, he strode across the walk and in the door.

"It is time," he told them.

They nodded, mumbling their agreement. And so the deed was done. And they gathered in a line to clasp his hand and pay homage to their Don.

One of them lingered to speak alone with him, seeking reassurance that all would be well. "You won't let them down?" he asked.

NEW YORK — The search for the Northwest Passage — a water route from Europe to Cathay, across the frozen wastes of North America — was one of the great adventure stories of all time, the vain quest of Sir Francis Drake and Henry Hudson, finally discovered at the turn of this century by Arctic explorer Ronald Amundsen.

With a prosaic thud, the mercenary consequence of this adventure was covered on the shipping news pages recently under the headline: "Waters Off Jersey Will Become Terminus of Northwest Passage." Ice-breaking supertankers will one day be bringing millions of barrels of Alaskan crude oil down through the bays and seaways of Canada to offshore terminals near Cape May.

Once again we see the pragmatizing of a dream, the glory of exploration ending up in a big tank in New Jersey. But the search for the Northwest Passage always had a commercial impetus; what has happened to adventure for adventure's sake, the sweetening of life by risk that rejects the practical application of exploration or the commercial embodiment of Evel Knievel?

MARQUIS CHILDS

NEW YORK — A large be-minked lady in the crowded toy shop was buying six dolls. They talk, they walk, they wet, all battery-propelled. The price: $60, plus tax. One for each of my six granddaughters, she tells the clerk.

The story is the same in the luxury stores in the glittering heart of Manhattan. In Cartier's and Tiffany's, the diamond necklaces and the emerald bracelets are going fast. The chic fur stores are finding it difficult to keep stocked with sables, a full-length cost at $25,000 and up.

In the streets, the big, black gas guzzlers help to jam the traffic that creeps along the main arteries. With chauffeurs at the wheel, limousines are parked double, the motor idling to keep the interior warm.

Whatever the indicators may say about unemployment, recession and inflation this, on the surface, is Boontown, U.S.A. The big spenders are still spending. They will help to raise the level of the Christmas trade and overcome the pinch said to be felt by lower-priced stores.

NEW YORK — Millions of Americans are consciously or subconsciously worried that they are now, or soon may be, terminally ill. They are uncertain of exactly what their doom will be — cancer, stroke or a common cold gone berserk. But whatever deadly disease it is, they're certain they'll get it, and every little symptom is a dire warning.

"I have a strange tingling in my eyebrow," Joe tells his wife. "I haven't wanted to mention it before." Joe's wife responds, "but I get this aching sensation in my fingernails."

It's no wonder Americans are so suspicious of their well-being and dreadful of their physical futures. Over the years, they have been nourished on a steady diet of bad news put out by medical, sociological and psychological experts whose studies seem to indicate that whatever one eats, drinks, breathes in or does, is likely to cause either cancer or heart attack.

Statehouse Secretary Whips Bean Inflation

By EDWARD W. HOWARD
Associated Press Writer

With all the squabbles of one kind and another going on in The Tower on the Plains it isn't easy to open a holiday season column on a happy note.

But, we found one.

We offer a tip of the hat to the secretary who works for one of Gov. J. James Exon's administrative assistants as possibly being the administration's most down to earth inflation fighter.

The secretary always kept a big container of jelly beans on her desk, which reporters always helped themselves to while waiting to see her boss.

About a week ago the jelly beans disappeared and a reporter complained.

"Jelly beans got to be a ripoff, they raised the price about 25 cents. No more jelly beans, gotta whip inflation," she said.

After a few days of shopping around she found the mints were still a good buy and filled the dish again.

State Sen. Ernest Chambers apparently intends to bring the governor directly into a controversy involving the education program at the Nebraska Penal Complex.

Chambers wants Mrs. Edith Whiting, director of education at the prison, fired. She has resigned effective next July, but will collect accrued sick leave until then.

Chambers contends she lied to the Judiciary Committee and falsified her credentials and therefore should be dismissed.

Chambers wrote a letter to Gov. J. James Exon Friday, noting Exon had "forced the resignation" of William Peters as personnel director, and asked Nebraska congressmen to back his call for Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz' resignation.

"You are a puzzle, or a man whose hands are tied. Neither Mr. Peters nor Mr. Butz should receive your ire while you can look the other way on Mrs. Whiting," Chambers said.

Chambers has aimed such verbal challenges at Exon before on the Whiting issue. The governor has chosen not to respond publicly.

But indications are Chambers has no intention of letting the matter drop, and every intention of keeping at Exon until the governor becomes directly involved.

Political hassles aside, Exon had to regard a decision by federal Judge Richard E. Robinson as the best Christmas present he is likely to get.

Robinson ordered the federal government to release about $36 million in impounded highway funds to Nebraska.

Exon critics had charged he lacked any semblance of a highway plan, and that he had put all his eggs in the federal basket, which was tied up in court.

Critics will still contend the federal funds are only a short term solution to Nebraska's troubles, and they're right.

But that is a problem Exon will have to deal with as he sees fit. His immediate concern was for the federal money.

Hospital Sweepstakes Lottery By Mail Illegal

Omaha (AP) — Christmas cards have been received in Omaha containing tickets to sell for a West Indies Hospital Sweepstakes.

U.S. District Atty. William Scharphorst said persons receiving such cards should dispose of them, or turn them over to postal inspectors.

He said it is against federal law to "use the mails to carry on a lottery."

Instructions with the Yuletide message say a horse race to be run at Aqueduct Race Track in New York will return $275,000 in prizes and that those who sell the tickets can keep a percentage.

Profits, the cover letter says, go to the West Indies Hospital Fund.

Omaha Has Long 'Wants' List

Omaha (AP) — The city of Omaha has a long list of things it wants from the 1975 legislature.

City Recreation Director Clarence Shafer said golfers at all city courses get thirsty, so the city should have more than its present limit of two beer licenses.

The Shafer proposal is only one of 17 to be considered by the City Council January seventh.

Among other items the council will be asked to put on its state legislative request are:

— Abolishment of the $5 limit ceiling on dog licenses.

— Require the state to reimburse Omaha for enforcing the state fire code.

— Change the method of taxing mobile homes.

— Submit to the voters a constitutional amendment that would permit tax incentive financing.

— Exempt public libraries from sales and use taxes.

— Allow the city to appeal city ordinance violation cases to the State Supreme Court.

Officials of local government have objected to the present mobile home taxing system, because it allows a quick depreciation, and owners of those a few years old pay low taxes while requiring the same type of city, county and municipal services.

Fire Chief Vernon Van Scy suggested the reimbursement for state fire inspections. He said the Omaha Fire Prevention Bureau spends about 75% of its time enforcing the state code.

City Councilman Betty Abbott said Nebraska Humane Society costs are rising, and it is difficult to operate with the proceeds of a $5 license.

Job Conditions Allegedly Linked To Wife's Killing

Omaha (UPI) — A $3 million lawsuit was on file in U.S. District Court here charging that poor job conditions led a husband to fatally stab his wife.

The suit was filed by the administrator of the estate of Mrs. Diana Kay Bartunek against American Smelting and Refining Co., her husband's employer.

The suit alleged that Mrs. Bartunek's husband, Edward Paul Bartunek Jr., an employee of American Smelting, was led to the stabbing because of poor ventilation at his place of work.

It claimed also that the company failed to take other precautions to safeguard the health of employees.

Bartunek is awaiting trial on a charge of second-degree murder.

The stabbing occurred in the couple's car while they were riding with their six children.

Statehouse Secretary Whips Bean Inflation

By EDWARD W. HOWARD

Associated Press Writer

With all the squabbles of one kind and another going on in The Tower on the Plains it isn't easy to open a holiday season column on a happy note.

But, we found one.

We offer a tip of the hat to the secretary who works for one of Gov. J. James Exon's administrative assistants as possibly being the administration's most down to earth inflation fighter.

The secretary always kept a big container of jelly beans on her desk, which reporters always helped themselves to while waiting to see her boss.

About a week ago the jelly beans disappeared and a reporter complained.

"Jelly beans got to be a ripoff, they raised the price about 25 cents. No more jelly beans, gotta whip inflation," she said.

After a few days of shopping around she found the mints were still a good buy and filled the dish again.

State Sen. Ernest Chambers apparently intends to bring the governor directly into a controversy involving the education program at the Nebraska Penal Complex.

Chambers wants Mrs. Edith Whiting, director of education at the prison, fired. She has resigned effective next July, but will collect accrued sick leave until then.

Chambers contends she lied to the Judiciary Committee and falsified her credentials and therefore should be dismissed.

Chambers wrote a letter to Gov. J. James Exon Friday, noting Exon had "forced the resignation" of William Peters as personnel director, and asked Nebraska congressmen to back his call for Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz' resignation.

"You are a puzzle, or a man whose hands are tied. Neither Mr. Peters nor Mr. Butz should receive your ire while you can look the other way on Mrs. Whiting," Chambers said.

Chambers has aimed such verbal challenges at Exon before on the Whiting issue. The governor has chosen not to respond publicly.

But indications are Chambers has no intention of letting the matter drop, and every intention of keeping at Exon until the governor becomes directly involved.

Political hassles aside, Exon had to regard a decision by federal Judge Richard E. Robinson as the best Christmas present he is likely to get.

Robinson ordered the federal government to release about $36 million in impounded highway funds to Nebraska.

G.I. Diocese Closing

Grand Island (AP) — Bishop John J. Sullivan of the Grand Island Catholic Diocese announced Saturday that Blessed Sacrament and St. Mary's grade schools here would be closed at the end of this school year.

The bishop made the announcement after studying a report from a committee he had formed to study the situation. "Having weighed all the factors involved and still wishing that we could keep the whole system open, I reluctantly have had to make the decision to close our elementary schools effective at the conclusion of the current year," Bishop Sullivan said at a news conference.

"Central Catholic High School will continue, hopefully for many, many years to come, and our elementary religious education program will become a model operation in the near future," he added.

The decision culminated several months of study and meetings by the Grand Island Catholic community as it attempted to solve the problems of increasing costs of education and a decreasing financial base to support that education.

In September, Bishop Sullivan appointed the 36-member committee to study the financial problems of the city's three Catholic schools, and that committee submitted its recommendations to the bishop following its final meetings Dec. 12.

Police Search For Coed Killer After 19 Years

Omaha (AP) — Police are still searching for the killer of University of Omaha coed Carolyn Nevin, who was found slain on the campus 19 years ago.

Lt. James Perry of the police homicide division said officers have checked literally thousands of leads.

He said that whenever police find a .32-20 revolver in any of their cases they turn to the Nevin file. The honor student was shot to death Dec. 10, 1955 with that type of gun.

Perry said the .32-20 guns are test-fired and the slugs sent to the FBI laboratory for comparison with the four bullets used in the slaying.

Some veteran policemen have expressed belief there is a connection between the Nevin slaying and the shooting death of the wife of a Creighton University dental student 18 months later.

The man was sent to prison for the murder of the student's wife, but police reports show he has not admitted any connection with the Nevin case.

Battle Creek Co-Op Honored

Kansas City (AP) — The board of directors of the Battle Creek Farmers Cooperative at Battle Creek, Neb., has been named first recipient of the new leadership director award from Farmland Industries.

The cooperative was cited for outstanding service to its membership, including the enlargement of facilities consisting of a new office complex, chemical and fertilizer storage building and new grain storage.

USDA Yearbook A Guide For Consumers

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Farm Editor

The annual yearbook of agriculture published by the U.S. Department of Agriculture is really a shoppers' guide this year. The book is loaded with advice for homemakers and do-it-yourself people trying to save money.

The writers also seem to have saving fuel in mind by producing a section on suggested recreation and vacation activities designed for minimal gasoline use.

People who want to grow a WIN garden will find a large section that describes how to grow fruit, design a garden and grow ornamental plants such as roses and cacti.

Note On Moving

There is even a list of dos and don'ts for those who are planning a move from one home to another.

The book offers advice on how to choose plywood, floor covering and things like cleaning materials.

The food section is crammed with data on the size of servings and ways to compare the eating value of everything from pork chops to salad greens.

There is a whole section of information on canning various foods, including some things that won't work.

USDA Grading

The book explains how USDA grading is done and how the homemaker can use the information on labels in preparing better meals at a lower cost to her family.

There is also a section on organic foods which explains how the food is produced and warns that it will be more expensive than nonorganic foods.

Food terminology covers meat cuts and describes some products being sold under various trade and local names. The homemaker may not recognize them if she moves from one area of the nation to another.

The book covers a lot of terms used in the building industry to help explain what your carpenter is talking about or to aid the home repairman in selecting the best materials for the job he wants to do himself.

Appliances, Fireplaces

There are extensive sections on home appliances of all sizes and even a section on various types of fireplaces for the home.

Sections on tools describe everything from a paint brush to a plumber's helper.

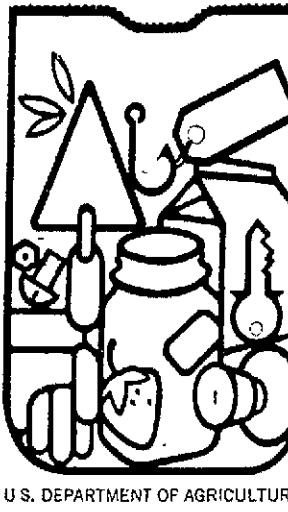

Transportation on a horse, bicycle or foot in the nation's national forests are included in the book, along with data on how to deal with stores that sell you products you are unhappy with.

The foreword of the book signed by Earl Butz, secretary of agriculture, notes "a smart shopper buys the right product at the right price. This book is designed to help the shopper do just that."

You can get your own copy by writing to any member of Nebraska's congressional delegation while their free supply lasts. The book can also be ordered direct from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Send along a check for $5.70 when you order it.

Two Nebraskans Die In Separate Accidents

A Lincoln woman was killed in a head-on crash a half mile north of I-80 on 70th Sunday afternoon, according to the State Patrol.

The patrol said Edna Edstrom, 81, of 3025 N. 61st, was killed when the car in which she was riding, driven by her husband Herbert, also 81, was in collision with a vehicle driven by Leeta Neuahr, 17, of rural Lincoln.

Mrs. Edstrom was listed in "fair" condition at St. Elizabeth Health Center and Miss Neuahr was treated for minor injuries and released.

Mrs. Edstrom's death brings the Lancaster County traffic death toll to 27 compared with 23 fatalities in 1973.

And the State Patrol in Norfolk reported Eunice Sherman, 43, of Macy, was killed Sunday when a car in which she was riding skidded out of control and struck a tree on a county road 1½ miles west of Macy.

She was a passenger in the rear seat of a car driven by Cleo Sherman, 15, the State Patrol said.

Omaha Mishap Victims Named

Omaha (AP) Two Omaha men killed in a snowmobile accident Friday night have been identified by the Douglas County sheriff's office.

Dead are Robert Meis, 31, and his brother-in-law Douglas Graff, 32.

Deputy Sheriff Dan Longwell said the snowmobile plunged into a ravine about 75 feet deep.

Authorities said both men died of head injuries.

Spotlight on Agriculture

By DOMINICK COSTELLO

Farm Editor

Farm cooperatives are edging into food processing a tiny step at a time as they face the fact that the lion's share of the consumer's food bill is going to the middleman and not to the farmer.

Whether the farmer in the end will really benefit from the processing by the cooperatives he owns a share in remains to be seen.

Cooperatives all too easily get to be very expensive operations through bad management under a board of directors that isn't paying attention to what the manager is doing.

As the cooperatives get bigger, they will attract some enemies from private industry who could make legal fees a major part of their operating costs.

The struggle for control of agricultural production could develop some really nasty aspects in the next several years.

It is worth noting that the cost per worker of the investment in the food processing industry is about half what it is per worker on farms. On the surface, owning processing equipment makes a lot of sense.

A group of leading economists

in Germany has written a report that is very critical of the agricultural policies of the Common Market. The general policy of price supports has resulted in fairly high prices for farmers and very high prices for consumers.

The economists propose a plan that would allow nations with the lowest cost production of a particular crop to produce it for everyone.

They suggest farm income be maintained by a direct subsidy rather than by artificially high prices in the market place.

Well, we had such a system here in the United States; however, the so-called general public opposed it and we now rely on the market place for our income.

There is both praise and condemnation of the new system, but in truth it remains to be seen if the market place can actually supply an adequate financial incentive to the farmers of the world without some governmental tinkering.

Equally important is how we feed those people who lack the financial ability to feed themselves when food is priced high enough to provide an incentive to the farmer to increase production. Feeding the world's poor is still a basic economic problem, not a question of can we produce enough food to feed everyone.

If you own horses and enter shows, you had better do some learning about something called swamp fever also called equine infectious anemia (EIA).

Apparently the disease is spread by flies, mosquitoes, or by contaminated instruments such as hypodermic needles.

Once a horse gets it, he is a carrier for life. Control consists of eliminating or isolating carriers. Veterinarians can test your horses and some 18 states already have regulations requiring such tests.

Carbaryl, known to farmers as Sevin, may provide an alternative to DDT in control of the Tussock moth which has a nasty habit of eating all the foliage from trees.

Other items that look promising include a bacteria and a virus, but they still require a good deal of testing to make sure they don't create more problems than they solve.

If we are to find new products to replace the insecticides we have now, someone is going to have put out some hard cash for research.

I am quite safe in predicting that whatever will be found to be effective will cost more than DDT in terms of dollars spent per acre. Perhaps the saving in wildlife is worth the extra cost of the new products, but there are a lot of arguments about that right down to questions about whether there actually is any loss of wildlife.

Harman died in a Beatrice hospital Friday after a lengthy illness.

Harman became a partner with his father in 1945 and became the owner of the mortuary when the elder Harman retired in 1964.

A native of Beatrice, Harman sold the mortuary last September.

Youth, 13, Killed In Gun Accident

Humboldt (AP) — A 13-year Humboldt youth was killed Sunday afternoon in an apparent hunting accident about one mile southwest of here.

The Richardson County Sheriff's office identified the boy as E. W. Shurtliff.

Officers said the youth was with a group of children setting traps across a stream from another group which was hunting.

Law Enforcers Honor Trooper, Youth

The annual association award for civilians went to 19-year-old Christ M. Madsen of Omaha.

Trooper Roumpf was cited for his part in a gun battle with a parole violator near Falls City last February. The parole violator, W. D. Kotsonis, was shot and killed in a stolen car during a running gun battle with state police.

Young Madsen was watching television last December when he heard a woman scream. He went out and saw a fleeing youth who had grabbed the woman's purse. Madsen pursued the purse snatcher in his bare feet until police were called and the youth arrested.

Note On Moving

There is even a list of dos and don'ts for those who are planning a move from one home to another.

The book offers advice on how to choose plywood, floor covering and things like cleaning materials.

The food section is crammed with data on the size of servings and ways to compare the eating value of everything from pork chops to salad greens.

There is a whole section of information on canning various foods, including some things that won't work.

USDA Grading

The book explains how USDA grading is done and how the homemaker can use the information on labels in preparing better meals at a lower cost to her job he wants to do himself.

There is also a section on organic foods which explains how the food is produced and warns that it will be more expensive than nonorganic foods.

Food terminology covers meat cuts and describes some products being sold under various trade and local names.

The homemaker may not recognize them if she moves from one area of the nation to another.

For Consumers

products you are unhappy with.

The foreword of the book signed by Earl Butz, secretary of agriculture, notes "a smart shopper buys the right product at the right price. This book is designed to help the shopper do just that."

Two Nebraskans Die In Separate Accidents

A Lincoln woman was killed in a head-on crash a half mile north of I-80 on 70th Sunday afternoon, according to the State Patrol.

The patrol said Edna Edstrom, 81, of 3025 N. 61st, was killed when the car in which she was riding, driven by her husband Herbert, also 81, was in collision with a vehicle driven by Leeta Neujahr, 17, of rural Lincoln.

Mr. Edstrom was listed in "fair" condition at St. Elizabeth Health Center and Miss Neujahr was treated for minor injuries and released.

And the State Patrol in Norfolk reported Eunice Sherman, 43, of Macy, was killed Sunday when a car in which she was riding skidded out of control and struck a tree on a county road 1½ miles west of Macy.

She was a passenger in the rear seat of a car driven by Cleo Sherman, 15, the State Patrol said.

Omaha Mishap Victims Named

Omaha (AP) — Two Omaha men killed in a snowmobile accident Friday night have been identified by the Douglas County sheriff's office.

Dead are Robert Meis, 31, and his brother-in-law Douglas Graff, 32.

Deputy Sheriff Dan Longwell said the snowmobile plunged into a ravine about 75 feet deep.

Authorities said both men died of head injuries.

Spotlight on Agriculture

Farm cooperatives are edging into food processing a tiny step at a time as they face the fact that the lion's share of the consumer's food bill is going to the middleman and not to the farmer.

Whether the farmer in the end will really benefit from the processing by the cooperatives he owns a share in remains to be seen.

Cooperatives all too easily get to be very expensive operations through bad management under a board of directors that isn't paying attention to what the manager is doing.

As the cooperatives get bigger, they will attract some enemies from private industry who could make legal fees a major part of their operating costs.

The struggle for control of agricultural production could develop some really nasty aspects in the next several years.

It is worth noting that the cost per worker of the investment in the food processing industry is about half what it is per worker on farms. On the surface, owning processing equipment makes a lot of sense.

Carbaryl, known to farmers as Sevin, may provide an alternative to DDT in control of the Tussock moth which has a nasty habit of eating all the foliage from trees.

If you own horses and enter shows, you had better do some learning about something called swamp fever also called equine infectious anemia (EIA).

Apparently the disease is spread by flies, mosquitoes, or by contaminated instruments such as hypodermic needles.

Once a horse gets it, he is a carrier for life. Control consists of eliminating or isolating carriers. Veterinarians can test your horses and some states already have regulations requiring such tests.

There is both praise and condemnation of the new system, but in truth it remains to be seen if the market place can actually supply an adequate financial incentive to the farmers of the world without some governmental tinkering.

Equally important is how we feed those people who lack the financial ability to feed themselves when food is priced high enough to provide an incentive to the farmer to increase production. Feeding the world's poor is still a basic economic problem, not a question of can

I am quite safe in predicting that whatever will be found to be effective will cost more than DDT in terms of dollars spent per acre. Perhaps the saving in wildlife is worth the extra cost of the new products, but there are a lot of arguments about that right down to questions about whether there actually is any loss of wildlife.

Funny thing about scientists. You can always find at least one who doesn't agree with what the rest are saying and sometimes that one turns out to be the one who is right. Remember Galileo, the guy who said little rocks fall just as fast as big ones do? Well it doesn't make sense but he is right.

Scottsbluff Man Fined For Joke

Omaha (AP) — A bomb scare incident at Eppley Airfield last Aug. 13 has resulted in a civil penalty of $250 and costs against a Scottsbluff dentist.

Federal District Judge John Denney assessed the penalty against Dr. Thom Van Boskirk.

The dentist reportedly remarked, "There's a bomb in there."

Home Reflects Changing Seasons

By LINDA OLIG

Star Staff Writer

"Welcome change as a friend; try to visualize new possibilities . . . Let it excite you, arouse your curiosity, and transfuse you with its own vitality . . . Major de Seversky."

Every fall, and then again every spring, Rosemary Delimont welcomes change into her home. To her, it's a dream come true.

She had always wanted two sets of slipcovers and drapes for her living room so she could alternate the appearance of her home in accord with the changing seasons.

So, when she and her family settled in Lincoln, five years ago she finally got the interchangeable parts, for her living-dining room duo.

Complete Switch

Now, when autumn is in the air, she and her daughters "mothball and stash away" the floral slipcovers, the white Austrian sheers, the royal blue overdrapes — and roll out the Persian rugs, covering the light, crisp shag carpeting.

The fall/winter look in the Delimont home at 8117 South Hazelwood Drive features a modern German couch and side chairs covered with a light beige corduroy, the Persian rugs, all in warm tones, and gold brocade drapes. No sheer drapes hang beneath the winter brocades.

"When I open the drapes in winter I want to get all the light and heat I possibly can," Mrs. Delimont explained.

A tablecloth of heavy fabric in warm colors is placed on the dining table for the winter months; a light blue and white one for summer.

Mrs. Delimont and her daughters spend the better part of a day making the twice-a-year change, stuffing the 12 loose pillows into the slipcovers, washing and hanging drapes, rolling out or up the rugs.

'Must Be Washable'

She buys ready-made drapes, then alters them to fit her windows and her taste. "They have to be washable," she insisted, "what with pets around and me smoking all the time."

Other seasonal changes made in the home have been forced to the wayside since Mrs. Delimont started working full time.

"Then I put seashells around in the spring," she said. "I also used to change the centerpiece every month, but now the centerpiece seems to always be a sewing machine, a typewriter or an adding machine," she laughed.

She has always liked variety in her life.

"We are used to moving every two years," she said, explaining that her late husband was a government-employed civil engineer. "We wanted to see as much of the country as we could . . . so we watched for openings to see where we wanted to go."

The couple and their four children were constantly on the move — from one part of the country to the other, to one part of the globe and back again.

Then, variety in the home wasn't so difficult to achieve — it was built into their ever-changing environment.

Idea In Back Of Mind

But Mrs. Delimont still had it in the back of her mind — the notion of having the two sets of slipcovers.

"My husband always said to wait until we settled down and then I could get my two slipcovers and two drapes," she recalled.

When she and her children moved to Lincoln to "settle down," she decided the time was ripe to realize her dream.

The notrump bid by Garozzo at this table was altogether different from the notrump bid at the previous table.

At the first table, West's notrump bid had designated the values normally associated with an opening notrump bid. It showed 16 to 18 points and balanced distribution.

But at the second table, West's notrump bid in the protective seat could have been made with considerably less values—perhaps 5 or 6 points less—than West actually had. East understandably passed and Garozzo made four notrump, scoring only 180 points instead of the 430 points he could have earned by bidding and making a game.

DEAR ABBY: I have two little boys and a dirty husband. Sheldon, my husband, doesn't like to bathe. I keep the house clean and the boys and I are immaculate, but I can't seem to convince Sheldon that he needs to keep himself clean.

He bathes only for hockey. If he has a game or hockey practice, he'll take a bath. But, Abby, that's not often enough for me.

Does a wife have to make love to a husband who smells bad? What on earth is wrong with a 25-year-old man who acts like this?

HOCKEY NUT'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Obviously, he doesn't care for water unless it's frozen. There's an outside chance that he's sick. Otherwise he's simply childish, lazy and inconsiderate. No, a wife doesn't have to make love to a husband who smells bad, so if you can't make him more fragrant with a little soft soap, your marriage could be all washed up.

DEAR ABBY: May I offer an alternate solution to "Mama's Girl," the bride-to-be who didn't want her father to give her away?

I am to be married in May, and my situation parallels hers.

My parents were divorced eleven years ago, and my mother raised me alone during those difficult years. My mother received no alimony, very little support money, and no help whatsoever from my father (who could easily have afforded all three).

Traditionally, the man to give the bride away should be the man who gave her his financial, emotional and moral support. My father does not deserve that honor. But my boss of five years does, so I have asked him to give me away. He said he would be honored.

Friends of ours had a housekeeper in their home for six months. Then they said that she was incompetent to care for their children, so they let her go and then promptly left for a month's vacation.

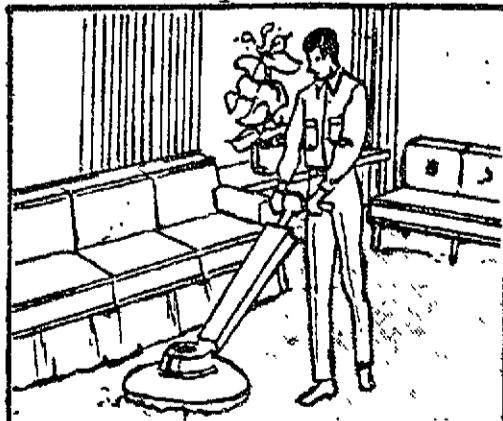

Now the friendship is ruined. And my husband and I are upset because we enjoyed a very nice relationship with this family. Was I wrong in hiring this woman?

DEAR WONDERING: No. And if your friendship was that fragile, you haven't lost much.

Santa Claus Being Kind To Christmas Charities

"Help make Christmas a little merrier . . .
"Send us your donation . . .
"Could you please give a can of food . . .
"Hundreds of families need your help . . .
"Buddy, could you spare a quarter for a cup of C?"

Everytime you open your door or check the mailbox or walk down the street this time of year, it seems someone is seeking a contribution.

This Christmas season, a lot of Lincoln families are trying to cut corners: sending fewer cards, doing less holiday baking and giving fewer and smaller gifts.

Just the same, most local Christmas charities are holding their ground, dollar for dollar, compared to last year.

The only local organization that appeared to be in a tight spot was the Cedars Home for Children.

Alberta Kuklish, Cedars Home superintendent, said she's still trying to rustle up some personal gifts for the home's 25 teen-agers.

Shortage For Teens

"We have plenty of gifts for the younger children," she noted. "But for the first time in 27 years, we don't have hardly anything for the teen-agers."

She said the Don Anderson Studios brought in more than 90 gifts for the children. "I don't know what we would have done without that."

Doris Collins of the Lincoln Action Program said contributions for food, candy and fruit baskets are "kinda slow."

To make things worse, "so many more people are out of work this year than last year, therefore the list is longer," she pointed out.

Mrs. Collins said several families have contacted her asking for "ordinary food"—milk and bread. "They're not even thinking about turkeys and hams," she said.

On the brighter side, the statewide Christmas Seal fund-raising venture is about 4% ahead of last year, reported Delmar Serafy, executive director of the American Lung Association of Nebraska.

Inflation Hurts

"But if you consider inflation," Serafy noted, "we're running awfully hard just to stay in place."

Major Ross Zarfas of the Salvation Army, said the "Tree of Lights" effort this year has been "super."

"We're holding our own," Zarfas said, despite the fact that bell-ringers have been on the streets fewer days because Thanksgiving came so late this year.

"People have the spirit of giving," Zarfas said, "despite all this talk of recession and hard times."

So far, more than 92% of the goal has been collected. And by 3 p.m. Tuesday, when the campaign officially ends, "it'll be over the top," Zarfas said with assurance.

Money collected will provide food, toys or both for more than 300 needy families in Lincoln, he said.

"Operation Santa Claus," sponsored for the past 27 years by KFOR radio station in Lincoln, has also had to run a little faster to catch up this year, General Manager Roger Larson said.

"But we've made up the lag that was built in because of the calendar," he said.

As of the end of last week, the campaign to buy personalized gifts for underprivileged children was about $3,000 short of the $16,000 goal.

'We'll Need More'

Larson noted that more money is being sought than last year, "but we're spending more and we'll need more."

The Lincoln Community Services Holiday Bureau hasn't had much trouble matching up needy families with individuals and organizations that offer to provide food, spokesman Rich Norby said.

The bureau helps coordinate charitable agencies such as the Salvation Army and the Welfare Department to eliminate duplication and make sure needy families aren't left out.

Jane Finney, Christmas giving coordinator for the Lancaster County Welfare Department, said all 80 families on her list will be provided for. "We don't have any left."

Pastor Jerry Dunn at the Peoples City Mission said, "Giving has been fantastic this year."

The Youth for Christ Campus Life group collected 1,152 cans of food, he said. Churches have also collected canned goods and toys have been donated for the five families now staying at the family shelter, he added.

"Overwhelming" was the word Vice Principal Dave VanHorn used to describe Lefler Junior High's canned food drive for needy families.

Not only did the 820 junior high students bring in 1,043 cans of food, but $88 was collected to buy hams and turkeys, VanHorn said.

Norwood Park Students Learn World Holiday Customs

Sixty Norwood Park School 3rd- and 4th-graders have participated in the cultural awareness unit focusing on world holiday customs.

The children learned not only how to say "Merry Christmas!" in different languages, but discovered that the Chinese celebrate the American New Year in January and their own in February — according to the lunar calendar.

Teacher Judy K. Gillam said a Chinese person explained Oriental holiday customs to the students, a Jewish person spoke on Hanukkah, and they also studied the East Indian year-end holiday.

The students prepared a booklet on world holiday customs, after exploring international foods, singing songs and making ornaments. They also learned their own individual nationalities and presented reports on the customs that people of their heritage observe.

Not Bad For Winter's First Day

A sunny 41-degree Sunday ushered in the first official day of winter in the Capital City, which wasn't bad at all compared to the record nine below for the date registered in 1933. Elsewhere in the country, some were luckier and some felt winter's impact with a vengeance, as heavy snow and a surge of arctic air spread from Montana to the northern Great Lakes. In McAllen, Tex., however, you could have lazed around in a balmy 83 degrees. (Star Photo)

2 Still Missing In Avalanche

Reykjavik, Iceland (UPI) — A 150-man rescue party searched Sunday for two men still missing from his hospital bed Sunday.

Prime Minister Geir Halgrímsson visited the disaster area Sunday with members of parliament.

Officials said they still could not estimate damage. The government Saturday offered to pay for the losses, including the town's only industry, a fishmeal factory, which was demolished by the snowslide as were several workshops and two homes.

Civil defense officials said one of the missing men had been running a bulldozer and the other driving a bus when the 800-yard avalanche roared down a mountain range and hit the town of 1,500 inhabitants.

Frogmen, coast guard vessels and fishing boats using floodlights searched the waters of the North Atlantic for bodies throughout the day and night, officials said.

"I heard loud noises, the lights went out and I saw the wall crumble," he told newsmen from his hospital bed Sunday.

"Everything turned white, snow white, in the matter of a second," Thorsteinsson said, and then he lost consciousness.

When he woke up he noted by his watch that he had been out for two hours.

"I realized what had happened and was not afraid. But I was anxious for my relatives, especially my mother," he said.

"Now and then I heard voices and I called and called until I could hardly utter a sound. I heard voices constantly for several hours and suddenly everything brightened and I saw the light. I had been rescued."

Final Rites Tuesday For Ex-Dean Thorpe

Services will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday, at Roper & Sons Mortuary for Nebraska educator Norman F. Thorpe, 69, 2410 Park Ave., who died Sunday.

He received both his masters and Ph.D from Nebraska.

He was a member of Trinity United Methodist Church.

His survivors include his wife, Goldie; a son, Douglas Lee of Los Angeles; daughters, Mrs. Serge (Sue) Castigiano of St. Louis and Mrs. John (Mary) Dolce of Central City, and seven grandchildren.

Armored Car Driver Held Up In Omaha

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—A lone gunman held up an armored car driver Sunday and escaped with about $66,000 in cash and checks.

Police said the robbery occurred inside the K-Mart Discount Store at 5000 L St. at about 12:30 p.m.

The driver, Leo George McBride, 31, told police he had just picked up the store receipts and was on his way out of the store when he was stopped by a white male, described as 25 to 30 years old with a pock-marked face and collar-length brown hair.

McBride told police the gunman demanded the money, then grabbed both the bag containing the money and McBride's revolver.

Police said the robber may have been holding an automatic .32 caliber revolver.

The store was open at the time of the robbery, police said.

Detective Lt. John Maley said seven persons witnessed the incident.

One witness said a man answering the suspect's description escaped on a black motorcycle.

John Owens, assistant security manager at the store, said one of his guards was notified by a clerk that a robbery was in progress and after going to the location was held off by the gunman.

Poll: People Want More Economic Programs

By LOUIS HARRIS

Although the public supports many of President Ford's specific programs to cure the economy, a sizable majority (77-11%) of the American people believes "more federal action will be needed to curb inflation and the recession."

The President is going to have to come up with a more decisive program if he is going to recover from the 61-32% negative rating on "keeping the economy healthy," an even lower, 75-18% negative rating on "keeping inflation under control," and the disastrous 82-10% no-confidence vote on his WIN program. These results most likely stem from public reaction to the cornerstone of Ford's proposals, the 5% surcharge on incomes of $15,000 or more for families and $7,500 for individuals. His projected surcharge is solidly rejected by 62-28 per cent.

A cross section of 1,525 households was recently asked by the Harris Survey:

"President Ford has put forth a program for curbing inflation and for getting the country out of the recession. Let me read you some key parts of what President Ford has proposed. For each, tell me if you favor or oppose it."

Viet Cong Take Village In South

Saigon (UPI) — The Viet Cong has taken over Chinh Tam village where South Vietnamese government police killed two persons during a demonstration last month, military sources said Sunday.

The sources said the Communists captured the village 70 miles east of Saigon and at least some of its 3,000 residents on Saturday.

The public is also solidly behind measures to help those hurt by the recession: lowering the taxes of families earning $8,000 or less a year (favored by 86-10%); giving an additional 13 weeks of unemployment in-

Just because Vanderbilt isn't nationally-rated, don't think the Commodores will be any easier than Indiana.

Conference. Los Angeles plays the Vikings at Minnesota next Sunday for the NFC crown with the winner earning a trip to New Orleans for Super Bowl IX.

The Rams intercepted three passes and recovered three Washington fumbles in Sunday's playoff game.

Los Angeles made one big change on offense and one on defense and both led to touchdowns:

On offense, the Rams utilized two tight ends—Bob Klein and Pat Curran—and just one running back in their "ace" formation, which spearheaded a 72-yard drive for the game's opening touchdown.

On defense, when it appeared as though the Redskins would pass, the Rams inserted a fourth linebacker—Isiah Robertson instead of a sixth defensive back. Robertson intercepted a pass by Washington's aging Sonny Jurgensen and returned it 59 yards for the game-clinching touchdown in the fourth quarter.

But over-all it was the huge Olsen and the other defensive stalwarts of the Rams, along with recuperating placekicker David Ray, who sent the Rams into the NFC championship game against the Vikings, who beat the St. Louis Cardinals 30-14 on Saturday.

"There is nothing graceful about rushing opposing backs," said the 33-year-old, 275-pound Olsen. "Sometimes you don't know how you got there. You just got there."

Olsen got there in time three times. First he hit Redskin runner Larry Brown to force a fumble. It led to Ray's game-winning 37-yard field goal. Then Olsen hit quarterback Sonny Jurgensen, who was throwing the pass that Robertson intercepted. And then Olsen sacked the venerable Washington quarterback a bit later to half another comeback threat by the Redskins.

Los Angeles inaugurated its "ace" formation in the first quarter and advanced 72 yards in eight plays for a touchdown.

Quarterback James Harris hit three passes for 40 yards before finding Klein for 10 yards and the score.

The formation, according to Coach Chuck Knox, gets its name from the use of a single setback and the two right ends.

Washington, the NFC's wild-card entry in the playoffs, came back to take control from the Rams, West Division champs, for the rest of the half, scoring on a 35-yard field goal by Mike Bragg and a one-yard touchdown plunge by Moses Denson to take a 10-7 lead.

"Even when we were down at

Although the Rams had a touchdown nullified by a penalty on the ensuing drive, Ray

The Commodores, who finished 23-5 overall and tied for first last season in the rugged Southeastern Conference with a 15-3 record, also boast 6-3 junior guard Butch Feher. Feher tallied 34 points against Jacksonville and 24 against undefeated USC.

Joining Fosnes and Feher as a returning starter is 6-2 junior guard Joe Ford who scored 25 points in the Trojan Classic.

Scoring points, however, was one of Nebraska's problems in the crushing loss to the powerful Hoosiers. The 60 points represented the team's low in a 5-3 season.

Realistically, however, the Huskers were at a severe disadvantage against what may be (by March) the nation's finest collegiate basketball team.

Vanderbilt, on the other hand, displays one of the country's top offensive threats in Jeff Fosnes.

The Commodores won their first four games, topping St. John's, 73-53.

Series' Record

Vanderbilt has won all three series games with Nebraska, including an 82-58 decision last year at Nashville in the Vanderbilt Invitational.

The game will end NU's non-conference schedule this year.

The Huskers will be either 6-3 or 5-4 after Monday night before leaving on Wednesday for the Big Eight Tournament in Kansas City, Mo.

quarter," admitted Jurgensen.

Just because Vanderbilt isn't nationally-rated, don't think the Commodores will be any easier than Indiana.

"Indiana probably has the finest defensive team in the country, so we're going from one extreme to another," said Nebraska basketball coach Joe Cipriano. "We're going from playing the best defensive team to one of the best offensive teams in the country (Vanderbilt)."

The Huskers, after dropping a 97-60 decision to second-rated Indiana Saturday in the finals of the Indiana Classic at Bloomington, host Vanderbilt Monday at 7:35 p.m. in the NU Coliseum.

Vanderbilt, which won its first four games, lost its last two. The Commodores, however, weren't exactly held scoreless.

Coach Roy Skinner's crew lost to host Southern California, 98-93 on Friday and dropped a 107-104 verdict to Jacksonville on Saturday in the Trojan Classic at Los Angeles. That hiked the Vanderbilt scoring average to 86.5 through six games.

"They play with the same tempo," Cipriano said of the Commodores. "They're a very smart basketball team that likes to fast break. They can really score points."

Scoring points, however, was one of Nebraska's problems in the crushing loss to the powerful Hoosiers. The 60 points represented the team's low in a 5-3 season.

Golden-toed Paul Rogers booted a Nebraska and Sun Bowl record four field goals—in the first quarter—and coach Bob Devaney's Cornhuskers romped to a 45-6 win over Georgia in the 35th edition of El Paso's Sun Bowl. Rogers booted FG's of 50, 32, 42 and 37 yards and sophomore I-back Jeff Kinney added a TD run of 11 yards to give Nebraska an 18-0 lead at the end of the first quarter and the Huskers were never threatened. For his record-setting effort, Rogers was named the game's outstanding offensive player. The Big Eight co-champion Cornhuskers rolled up a 355-185 total offense advantage over the outmanned Bulldogs. Dan Schneiss led Husker rushers with 63 yards and Van Brownson completed 11 of 18 passes for 109.

Steelers' quarterback Terry Bradshaw looks for his target as he gets off a pass before the Buffalo Bills defense can move in to stop him.

Bradshaw's 'Best Day' Crushes Bills, 32-14

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Quarterback Terry Bradshaw, benched, booed and bewildered early this season, led a 26-point second-quarter spurt that enabled the Pittsburgh Steelers to whip the Buffalo Bills 32-14 on Sunday in their National Football League playoff game.

"The best game I've ever had in the pros," Bradshaw said calmly after Pittsburgh moved into next week's American Conference title game in Oakland against the Raiders.

Bradshaw, who charted plays the first six games of the season while Jefferson Street Joe Gilliam quarterbacked Pittsburgh, hit seven of nine passes in the second-quarter burst, which also included three touchdown plunges by Franco Harris.

"I've never really felt in complete control of the game like that before," added Bradshaw, who finished with completions on 12 of 19 passes for 203 yards and also rushed five times for 48 yards.

The Steelers' offense often had been booted at home this season for inconsistency. But this time it came through solidly against Buffalo on a day when Pittsburgh's normally dominant defense forced only one turnover.

"Not too many people believed me, but I never lost confidence in our offense," said Steelers' Coach Chuck Noll, whose club won the AFC Central Division title with a 10-4 record.

"They went crazy, didn't they?" exclaimed Steelers' linebacker Jack Ham. "I'd have hated to be Buffalo's defense today."

Pittsburgh, making its third playoff appearance in a row, took a 3-0 lead on the opening series on a 21-yard field goal by Roy Gerela.

Buffalo, facing its first post-season test since 1966, responded with a 56-yard march that ended with Joe Ferguson's 22-yard touchdown pass to tight end Paul Seymour.

That gave the Bills a 7-3 lead going into the second period, and it looked as if Buffalo had regained its spark after dropping four of the last six regular-season games.

"I actually thought we would win the game," said Simpson.

But then Pittsburgh's 26-point burst began.

Bradshaw lofted a 27-yard touchdown pass to running back Rocky Bleier, who had slipped behind two defenders. Both of them had converged on Harris, who mistakenly ran a pattern into the same area as Bleier.

"We do whatever it takes, and mistakes can sometimes help you," Noll beamed.

Harris capped a 66-yard march with a one-yard dive for his first touchdown.

On Saturday, Fran Tarkenton passed to John Gilliam for touchdowns of 16 and 38 yards and Nate Wright recovered a Terry Metcalf fumble and ran it 20 yards for a score in the Vikings' victory that knocked the Cardinals out of their first playoff since 1948.

And, three hours later, in one of the wildest playoff game endings in NFL history, Ken Stabler's fourth touchdown pass, an eight-yarder to Clarence Davis with 26 seconds to play, carried Oakland past the Dolphins.

The winning pass ended a 67-yard drive and came after the Dolphins had gone ahead 26-21 on rookie Benny Malone's 22-yard touchdown run. That score, in turn, followed a 71-yard touchdown pass play from Stabler to Cliff Branch, who dived to catch the ball behind a Miami defender at the Dolphins' 29-yard line, then jumped to his feet and ran in, putting Oakland ahead 21-19 with 4:37 to play.

Nevertheless, Novak appreciates the opportunity to coach the junior varsity after Al Nissen, a former Husker player, decided to enter medical school in Omaha rather than coach the JVs for another year.

"I was going to school in the mornings and I didn't have anything going in the afternoons. I wanted to stay close to the basketball team," Novak explained. "So when coach Cipriano offered me a chance to coach the junior varsity, I was really happy. I've always wanted to coach and this was a great opportunity."

Novak, who was graduated from Nebraska Friday, hopes the Huskers improve after the semester break. The JVs lost to Brody's, 92-55 and then fell to Nebraska Southern 74-45, on two straight nights last week.

"I do think we can play some defense," he said. "But I'm sure we'll improve after the new year since we will have been playing together longer."

Just like when he was a Husker player, Tom Novak is looking to the future. And that future, he hopes, will include a high school coaching offer.

Tom Novak . . . Husker coach rather than getting a job right out of college," he said.

Although Novak said he would accept a Class A or Class B coaching spot anywhere in Nebraska, he added that he would prefer a school within the immediate Lincoln or Omaha areas.

Working with the non-scholarship players on the junior varsity team has also taught Novak to demonstrate patience with players that were not highly recruited.

"I do my share of yelling at them, but I think they (players) respect that I've played here for four years," he said. "I think I've learned to be patient with them. I've also played with scholarship players who knew what they were doing and were recruited by lots of schools."

"But it's different with these players," he added. "They don't owe us anything like the scholarship players who are getting a free education. These players are out on their own time yet they work as hard as the varsity does.

"All they can say is that they're part of the Nebraska organization," he continued. "We don't have any scholarship athletes—they're all walk-ons."

While Novak began drills with 40 players, there are 13 left. He expects that number to decrease after the new year when some of the varsity freshmen will gain experience playing in junior varsity games, thereby eliminating some junior varsity players from a starting spot.

Novak recalled that on the JV team he played on four years ago, there were just eight players — five scholarship players and three walk-ons.

Haden Garners Rhodes

Los Angeles (AP) — Quarterback Pat Haden of the University of Southern California football team was notified Saturday that he has won a prestigious Rhodes Scholarship for two years of postgraduate study at Oxford University.

man back in here," Holtz said, gesturing to correct an earlier statement which would carry the name mistake. "I sure don't want to make that fullback mad."

With his 9th-ranked North Carolina State Wolfpack, 9-2, underdogs against Houston, 8-3, in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl, Holtz admitted the truism which overrides all other considerations.

"My question isn't how good is our team," he said. "It's how good Houston will be."

Coaches know how well the inconsistent Cougars can be, but no one knows if they will play to their potential. Holtz didn't want to say anything to give them incentive.

He did consider Housman, the fullback, as the toughest runner an improved Wolfpack defense, which shut down Penn State and Arizona State, will face.

It should be a running game, with Housman, quarterback Bubba McGallion and slick halfbacks Marshall Johnson, Reggie Cherry and Donnie "Quick Draw" McGraw leading Houston.

State will rely on all-Atlantic Coast back Stan Fritts, fullback Roland Hooks and running quarterback Dave Buckey.

"I feel we have some great running backs," Holtz said. "And I think Houston's backs are comparable to ours, so that should tell you what I think of Houston."

State has a much better passing game, but Houston's secondary has been improved since two early season losses.

State's kicking game is better with the nation's second punter, and the "Rat Pack" specialty team has racked up yardage harder than Houston has.

The Cougars have fumbled twice as much this season, but have run for 700 more yards.

The teams have played two common opponents. Both Houston and State whipped South Carolina. State's 37-14 win over Arizona State as opposed to Houston's 30-9 loss doesn't say much, because Houston had not found its present quarterback and State played a severely injured ASU team.

Houston's huge defense is better, with 6-8 Mack Mitchell and Larry Keller at ends and Wilson Whitley (285) and Lee Canali (270) at tackles.

State has a big edge at quarterback with experienced junior Buckley running things. Houston will start McGallion, a sophomore.

Harris Never 'Quit'

Los Angeles (UPI) — James Harris, who took over as the Los Angeles Rams' no. 1 quarterback five games into the regular season, said he never lost heart.

"We were never out of the ball game and I always felt we could win," the man who replaced Jim Hadl said after the Rams' 19-10 come-from-behind playoff win over the Washington Redskins Sunday.

"I never got down," Harris said. "Now we're going to Minnesota and we've just got to forget about the weather there. I think we can win."

The Rams qualified to face the Vikings at Minnesota next Sunday in a rematch of a Nov. 24 game at Los Angeles. The Rams won that one 20-17.

David Ray, who came out of a hospital bed to hit two second-half field goals, didn't have much to say to reporters.

"I'm glad we won, but I have no other comment," said Ray, who was hospitalized during the week with muscle spasms in his back. He tied the game with a 37-yard field goal in the third quarter and put the Rams ahead 13-10 with a 26-yarder early in the fourth quarter.

Tennis Wins To Australians

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Australians Tony Roche and Evonne Goolagong captured the singles titles in the New South Wales Open Tennis Championships as play concluded Sunday.

"We got good pressure on their quarterbacks (Bill Kilmer and Sonny Jurgensen). It's tough when you go against the caliber quarterbacks they have and it's great to beat a team the caliber of the Redskins."

Ram linebacker Isiah Robertson, who broke the Redskins' back with a 59-yard pass interception return for a touchdown in the fourth quarter, said, "we really worked hard for this game. You owe it to yourself to get ready."

Of his touchdown runback after picking off Jurgensen's pass, Robertson said, "I was determined to run it all the way even if I had to run it to the bleachers."

Jurgensen, who was intercepted three times in the final quarter, said he was "hit in the face" on the Robertson interception.

"That took something off the ball," he said. "Larry Brown was wide open but Isiah cut in front of him and just made a good play."

If Brown had caught the ball, he would still be running. The other two interceptions came when the Rams were in their prevent defense. They knew we had to throw at that particular time."

Former San Francisco 49ers running back Doug Cunningham, whose fumble set up Ray's go-ahead field goal, was downcast.

"The ball just hit out of my hands," he said. "It obviously was the big play of the game. It turned everything around. It was the first kickoff that I've handled this year."

Gibson To Go To Louisville

Louisville, Ky. (UPI) — Vince Gibson, former football coach at Kansas State University, Sunday night was named head coach at the University of Louisville.

He will be recommended to the UL Board of Trustees Jan. 20 to succeed former Cardinal coach T. W. Alley, who resigned Dec. 4.

The naming of Gibson took place at a suburban motel and was announced by UL athletic director Dave Hart, who called Gibson "a man of high quality and impressive credentials."

Gibson, who had one year remaining in his contract at Kansas State, resigned at the end of the past season.

He compiled a 33-52 won-lost record in eight seasons at Kansas State. This past season his team finished with a 4-7 mark, 1-6 in the Big Eight Conference.

Alley had a 9-13 record in two seasons at Louisville, including a 4-7 record for the past season.

Gibson said he planned to bring four of his staff members with him from Kansas State.

Introduced at the news conference, he said, "a lot of people are going to think I'm dumb taking this job. I came to Louisville for one reason — to put Louisville on the map. Louisville is going to have big-time football."

"I'm coming and not planning on moving away in one or two years. I intend to make Louisville my home."

"The offense played super today. They were the stars of the team," said linebacker Jack Ham, who largely was responsible for holding Simpson in check.

"The offense was just doing a great defensive job on us in the second half," Bradshaw said.

Lynn Swann, rookie wide receiver who set up Pittsburgh's second touchdown with a sensational 35-yard catch, was one of the few Steelers who felt some compassion for Buffalo. Like Simpson, a close friend, Swann also starred at Southern California.

"Buffalo was just doing a great defensive job on us in the second half," Bradshaw said.

Five collegiate swimming teams began arriving in Christiansted, St. Croix, V.I., to practice during the Christmas holidays and participate in exhibition meets with local swimmers. The teams are from Chicago State, Harvard, Duke, Virginia and Bethany.

Buffalo's Score Inspires Steelers

Pittsburgh (UPI) — As Franco Harris explained it, Buffalo lost the American Football Conference playoff Sunday when the Bills scored a first period touchdown and took a 7-3 lead over the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"Our offense probably was the best so far this year and we're sure going to need it against Oakland," said Noll. "Actually we played well in all aspects of the game, perhaps with the exception of those two blocked extra points (in the second period)."

"After that touchdown," Harris continued, "the adrenaline really started flowing because we realized that we might get beat. Then we took it to them."

The Steelers broke loose for four touchdowns in the second period to take a 29-7 halftime lead and finally won 32-14 to move into the AFC championship game next Sunday at Oakland.

Even among the Steelers' usually brilliant defensive team, which held Buffalo's O.J. Simpson to only 49 yards rushing, the kudos went to the offense.

"The offense played super today. They were the stars of the team," said linebacker Jack Ham, who largely was responsible for holding Simpson in check.

"The offense was just doing a great defensive job on us in the second half," Bradshaw said.

Harris Fillion, the leading North American harness racing driver, outpointed Europe's top harness driver, Hans Fromming, in a series of races Sunday at Monticello, N.Y. At the same time, he increased his record total of victories to 616 this year.

Quarterback Terry Bradshaw, who finished with 12 completions in 19 attempts for 203 yards and one touchdown, said the Pittsburgh offense actually "has gained confidence in the last three or four weeks. We've been improving with each game and made some great adjustments against Buffalo."

Yes, Bradshaw was asked, but about Pittsburgh scoring only three points in the second half after putting 26 on the scoreboard in the second quarter?

"Buffalo was just doing a great defensive job on us in the second half," Bradshaw said.

Esposito Hits 500 Goal Mark

BOSTON (AP) — Center Phil Esposito of the Boston Bruins became the sixth player in National Hockey League history to score 500 goals Sunday night with a pair of second-period tallies against the Detroit Red Wings.

The NHL scoring champion in five of the last six years connected for his 33rd of the season with a long slap shot while the Bruins were shorthanded.

Two minutes later he scored again on a screened backhand shot while the Bruins had a man

'Inconsistent' Houston To Challenge Wolfpack

Houston (UPI) — Coach Lou Holtz looks like a college professor with thick glasses, pipe and conservative clothes. So it was with embarrassment that his English escaped him.

"That Housman is one of the finest running backs we will play against," Holtz said, speaking of University of Houston sophomore fullback John Housman, pronounced Housman.

Cougars' quarterback David Housman, one writer corrected Holtz, will be sitting on the bench Monday night. The contest will be televised on Channel 7 at 8 p.m.

Haden Garners Rhodes

Los Angeles (AP) — Quarterback Pat Haden of the University of Southern California football team was notified Saturday that he has won a prestigious Rhodes Scholarship for two years of postgraduate study at Oxford University.

"I got it and I'm accepting it," the senior academic All-American said. He was told late Saturday afternoon after final interviews before seven former Rhodes scholars and a committee chairman at California Institute of Technology.

Haden, an English major whose grade-point average is 3.7 on a scale of 4.0, will attend Oxford for two years beginning next October. He will lead the Trojans against Ohio State in the Rose Bowl Jan. 1, but said he would not immediately pursue a pro football career.

man back in here," Holtz said, gesturing to correct an earlier statement which would carry the name mistake. "I sure don't want to make that fullback mad."

With his 9th-ranked North Carolina State Wolfpack, 9-2, underdogs against Houston, 8-3, in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl, Holtz admitted the truism which overrides all other considerations.

State has a big edge at quarterback with experienced junior Buckey running things. Houston will start McGillion, a sophomore.

"My question isn't how good is our team," he said. "It's how good Houston will be."

Coaches know how well the inconsistent Cougars can be, but no one knows if they will play to their potential. Holtz didn't want to say anything to give them incentive.

He did consider Housman, the fullback, as the toughest runner on an improved Wolfpack defense, which shut down Penn State and Arizona State, will face.

It should be a running game, with Housman, quarterback Bubba McGillion and slick halfbacks Marshall Johnson, Reggie Cherry and Donnie "Quick Draw" McGraw leading Houston.

State will rely on all-Atlantic Coast back Stan Fritts, fullback Roland Hooks and running quarterback Dave Buckley.

"I feel we have some great running backs," Holtz said. "And I think Houston's backs are comparable to ours, so that should tell you what I think of Houston."

State has a much better passing game, but Houston's secondary has been improved since two early season losses.

State's kicking game is better with the nation's second punter, and the "Rat Pack" specialty team has racked opponents harder than Houston has.

The Cougars have fumbled twice as much this season, but have run for 700 more yards.

The teams have played two common opponents. Both Houston and State whipped South Carolina. State's 37-14 win over Arizona State as opposed to Houston's 30-9 loss doesn't say much, because Houston had not found its present quarterback and State played a severely injured ASU team.

Houston's huge defense is better, with 6-8 Mack Mitchell and Larry Keller at ends and Wilson Whitley (285) and Lee Canalito (270) at tackles.

"Our offense probably was the best so far this year and we're sure going to need it against Oakland," said Noll. "Actually we played well in all aspects of the game, perhaps with the exception of those two blocked extra points (in the second period)."

UCLA Rallies To Top Irish

By United Press International
It was the same thing that happened on the football field at the Los Angeles Coliseum three weeks ago when Southern California came back from a 24-0 deficit to demoralize, disgust and demolish Notre Dame with 55 points while holding the Irish scoreless.

The National television cameras didn't catch it, but the screaming crowd at Pauley Pavilion Saturday night sensed the same thing was happening again. A few minutes after the half—the most important player in the game—the invisible "Mo Mentum"—switched uniforms in mid-dribble.

How else to explain a complete-reversal of the game, UCLA suddenly turning around from a 19-point disadvantage to beat Notre Dame by 13 points, 85-72? Maybe "Mo" just finally realized where the game was being played, that UCLA never loses on its home court. At least not in the 70 previous games. It was history, then, inevitable fate. It was in the bag from the beginning.

If it was, it sure didn't look like it for the first 23 minutes. Notre Dame, which ended UCLA's record winning streak at 88 games last January in South Bend, Ind., harassed the Bruin guards and shot almost 58 percent from the floor in the first half to take a 47-37 lead at intermission after leading once by 19 points at 29-10. The Bruins' home streak seemed doomed when the Irish, paced by Adrian Dantley, opened the second half with a 6-0 burst to give them a 16-point lead a few minutes later.

But then came "Mo Mentum," perhaps disguised in the uniform of sophomore forward Richard Washington. Washington started taking command of the boards and reeled off 18 points in the second half to give the third-ranked Bruins their sixth win without a loss this season.

UCLA ran off 10 straight points to narrow the lead to 53-47 with 14 minutes left and then picked away at the 11th-ranked Irish before catching them at 59-59 on a short jumper by Dave Meyers with 9:16 remaining.

Dantley, who topped all scorers with 30 points, gave the Irish their last lead at 63-64 with a lay-in with 5:30 showing on the clock. But Washington, who scored a career high of 25, put the Bruins back on top 66-65 with a short jump shot seconds later.

In other college basketball action among top ten teams Saturday, David Thompson's 43 points led top-ranked North Carolina State to a 95-79 victory over Davidson, second-ranked Indiana walloped Nebraska 97-60, fourth-ranked Louisville beat seventh-ranked Marquette 80-69, fifth-ranked Southern California defeated New Mexico 84-74, sixth-ranked Maryland downed George Washington 81-67, eighth-ranked Alabama ripped Austin Peay 85-65 and ninth-ranked North Carolina clipped Yale 70-53.

North Carolina State, leading 53-37 with 18:10 left in the game, saw the scrappy Wildcats outscore them 16-2 to move within two points at 59-57 six minutes later. Wolfpack guard Moe Rivers then scored two quick baskets and Thompson added two others as North Carolina State took a 69-61 lead and was never in trouble from that point on. Wolfpack freshman Kenny Carr finished with 21 points.

Indiana took control early in the first half to crush Nebraska and won the Indiana Classic. The Hoosiers, now 8-0, broke away from an 8-8 tie to take a 40-21 halftime lead, and the Cornhuskers could get no closer than 14 points in the second half. Scott May topped Indiana with 27 points and Steve Green added 18.

Louisville got 17 second half points from Junior Bridgeman to beat Marquette in the Milwaukee Arena. The Warriors, who lost 65-58 to Pittsburgh earlier in the week, staged a slowdown offense in the first half, and trailed only 31-27 at intermission. But when the Warriors began to run with Louisville in the second half, they immediately found themselves outclassed. With Bridgeman leading the way, Louisville built a 16-point lead at 56-40 with 6:24 to play. At that point, the capacity crowd stood and cheered and the Warriors responded by closing to within six before the Cardinals staved off the challenge.

In other games, South Carolina beat LSU 77-64, Virginia Tech upset Washington 88-77, Arizona beat Colorado 94-63, Penn whopped Northeastern 109-72, Memphis State edged Pepperdine 111-108 in overtime, Oklahoma ripped Wichita State 75-55 and Kentucky beat Oklahoma State 90-65.

at all. He's a man who hasn't lost his appreciation for his friends or for his home. It's all very touching. Here's a man who is being offered the world, and all he really wants for himself is to be able to hunt and fish and to be able to provide education and lifetime security for his kids.

"He's seems totally unaffected by all the commotion around him. He has not forgotten his values. He's a very fortunate man. Not only because circumstances and his God-given talents have placed him in an enviable position, but also because he's picked up and held on to the right kind of values," Baylis said.

"Jim's down to earth. He's the same person he's always been," says Chris Powell, sports editor of the Ahoskie newspaper. "He may be a star but he doesn't act like one."

"He's as good a family man as anybody I've ever seen," says J. Carlton Cherry, Hunter's principal attorney.

Hunter spent Sunday with his family. In the morning they went to church, where his wife sings in the choir. "Then I'm just going to relax," Hunter said.

Come on mate, let's go for a skate.

Square off those debts of conscience and close the year in peace ... Silent Night composed by Mohr, Bavaria Dec. 24, 1818 ... Full Cold Moon Dec. 28 ... Great Waves at sea now ... Average length of days for week, 9 hours, 5 minutes ... Robin Hood died Dec. 24, 1247 ... Battle of Wounded Knee Creek Dec. 29, 1890 ... Gas lights installed in White House Dec. 29, 1848 ... Merry Christmas, and be of good cheer; things will be better next year.

Old Farmer's Riddle: What pipes are never smoked? (Answer below.)

Ask the Old Farmer: Can you give me the name of the liniment, a thick gray solution, used on the legs of cows and horses when they suffer from stiffness caused by damp ground?

The old-timers themselves favored this liniment when they had stiff joints. It has a strong medicinal odor. Kendall's Liniment was for horses; Slade's was used for both horses and humans.

Home Hint: Saucepans and other tin or granite dishes browned by use, may be cleaned by letting them remain half an hour in boiling soot water, then rubbing with wire cloth or stiff brush ... Light answers: Baspines.

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECASTS

Central Great Plains: First part of week mostly cloudy and cold; end of week sunny and milder.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR
IS LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
